Jury Informed Of Policeman's Numbers Play

Miss Franklin Says Bets Were Phoned To Acalotti by Officer Winters

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

A Metropolitan policeman regularly left "numbers plays" in the cash register of a Thomas Circle liquor store to be picked up by indicted gambler Attilio Acalotti, the Government's key gambling witness testified yesterday.

Bernice Franklin, the pretty red-haired former girl friend of Acalotti, identified the policeman as "Officer Winters."

Last month, Miss Franklin identified Police Private Kenneth A. Winters as an "associate" of Acalotti when the self-styled "Mayor of Thomas Circle" was tried and convicted of threatening her.

She testified yesterday that Winters telephoned numbers bets to Acalotti's apartment at 908 14th st. nw., and left money for the bets in small, brown bank envelopes at the Public Liquor Store, 1136 14th st. nw.

Is First Witness

She was the Government's first witness in the trial of Acalotti, William (Snags) Lewis and Frank Billeci on charges of owning and operating a numbers lottery.

Miss Franklin told the jury that Winters was one of three men who would "leave their numbers play" for Acalotti at the liquor store.

"Winters and the others would call him up on the telephone and Acalotti would get what they wanted to bet," she said.

"Then a man I knew as Pop, Bill King and Winters would leave their money there at the liquor store and Acalotti would pick up the money in brown bank envelopes," she said.

Winters was transferred from his job as licensing officer of No. 2 Precinct on December 23, two weeks after Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett launched an investigation of Miss Franklin's charges in the Acalotti trial that three police officers were regularly paid off by Acalotti.

Inspector George R. Wallrodt, heading the police investigation, was a spectator at yesterday's trial session.

Reached at his home, 1659 Fort Davis st. se., last night, Winters said, "It's a damn lie. That's all I've got to say about it."

Settled Debts Weekly

Miss Franklin also testified yesterday that Acalotti and Billeci regularly settled their lay-off bets in the office and presence of Herman Cohen, night street sales supervisor of the Washington Times-Herald.

She told a District Court jury

Slot Machine Bill Provides Interstate Ban

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

A bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines and thus kill what the bill's author called "perhaps the most highly organized criminal enterprise in America" was dropped into the House hopper yesterday.

Representative Prince H. Preston (D., Ga.) offered the bill, complete with proposed punishment for violators of up to $5000 fine, two years in jail or both.

He said he hopes for hearings by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee at this session. He told a reporter it will take about two months to get ready for such hearings.

Preston said he is offering the bill after more than a year's study of the slot machine racket. He said he was influenced by a recent series on the tygoons, modern-day gambling racketeers, by Reporter Edward T. Folliard in The Washington Post, by an article in Collier's last year and by the demand, in yesterday's Post, of Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los

Congress Unit Favors Broad Budget Change

Committee Would Also Increase Power Of Federal Reserve

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A key congressional subcommittee yesterday proposed a profound liberalization of Federal budget policy, rejecting the goal of a balanced budget every year.

At the same time, it recommended a series of legislative changes to increase the power and broaden the coverage of the Federal Reserve system.

One of these, supporting the thesis of Federal Reserve Board member Marriner S. Eccles, would give the board controlling voice on credit policies and permit it to overrule the Treasury's "easy money" program.

The proposals were made by Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) subcommittee of the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report. Its special field, on which it conducted studies and held hearings last year, is monetary, credit and fiscal policies.

The recommendation, in the report made public yesterday calling for a "stabilizing" but not necessarily an annually balanced budget, had been expected from Douglas and his Democratic colleagues. The fact that it was joined in by Republican members—particularly Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (Mich.), ranking minority member of the House Banking and Currency Committee—was noteworthy.

Although in recent years the policy of an annually balanced Federal budget was honored more in the breach than the observance, it has nevertheless been considered as virtually sacrosanct—as an objective and guiding philosophy.

The report, however, condemns it as a device which, if followed, would make depressions deeper and inflations higher. Instead, the subcommittee called for setting tax rates and budget expenditures in such a way that in good times there would be a surplus of revenue to be used to retire Federal debt. This would tend to dampen inflationary forces.

In bad times, a deficit would result, but in itself this would be a

Holober Jury Fails to Reach Verdict in Fairfax Slaying

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

A Fairfax County jury failed to reach a verdict in the murder trial of Charles Francis Holober after deliberating nearly five hours yesterday.

Judge Paul Brown ordered the jurors locked up overnight at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. He authorized them to continue deliberations there if they so desired.

Holober is on trial for his life for shooting his wife to death and burying her nearly a year ago. He did not stand trial for the burial alive with his wife's body of his 8-month-old daughter.

The jury received the case originally at 2 p. m. At 6:15 p. m., Judge Brown sent the jurors out to dinner after they reported that they were nowhere near a verdict.

At 8:05 p. m., the jury returned to its room. At 8:45 p. m., Judge Brown summoned the dozen men before him. At that time, Floyd Brinkley, of McLean, Va., speaking for the jurors, asked Judge Brown "what factors to take into consideration in handing out punishment." He asked if any mitigating circumstances were to be considered.

"Anything introduced in the evidence," Judge Brown replied,

Trio Hunted In Warring Holdup Case

Barrett Resolved To Get 'Vicious Mobsters' Preying On D. C. Gamblers

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Police Chief Robert J. Barrett yesterday announced an all-out effort to nab the "vicious out-of-town, professional mobsters" who robbed Emmitt Warring, one-time local numbers overlord, and who are preying on other District gamblers.

"We can't have this sort of thing going on here," said Major Barrett. "The next thing you know they'll be going into homes of businessmen."

Barrett expressed confidence police will track down the three bandits who on Monday slugged Warring's brother-in-law, tied up a maid, lay in wait for Warring—then forced him to open a wall safe in his fashionable home, 3900 Macomb st. nw.

No Report to Police

Warring, refusing to confirm or deny the incident, has not made any report to police, but Barrett said he believes the robbery occurred and the loot was about $20,000. The chief also remarked he has information indicating the thugs were out-of-town professionals aided by a local "punk," acting as "finger man."

Barrett surmised that the same mobsters hijacked the stakes—amounting to more than Warring yielded—at a floating crap game in the northeast section last November.

This intramural episode also went unreported to police. Such is the noblesse oblige of professional gamblers.

But Detective Sergt. Paul Clarke, of the police robbery squad, and a former ace arrester of gamblers, chanced upon information about both affairs.

The dice game participants, when questioned, indignantly denied any such untoward event; Warring, acording to one report, refused to discuss the matter. Another source indicated Warring has described the assailants but prefers this not to be known publicly, and so has not made an official report.

How Holdup Occurred

Barrett said this is the way police heard the Warring holdup occurred:

About 3 p. m. Monday a man who said he was delivering oranges was admitted to the handsome brick Warring home. Two other men suddenly joined him, forced their way in, and beat up William Cady, a brother-in-law of Warring.

Then the trio tied up Cady and the maid and settled down to wait for Warring.

Warring, returning home between 5:30 and 6 p. m., was forced Behind him in his car, Hair left Coble. He had a bullet through his brain and died a few hours later.

Ship Sinks British Sub; 60 Trapped

14 Saved, 2 Dead As Tanker Rams Craft in Thames; Rescue Hope High

London, (Friday) Jan. 13 (AP).—A small Swedish tanker last night rammed and sank the British submarine Truculent, carrying 76 men, in the Thames Estuary.

At least 14 of the Truculent crewmen were reported rescued from the dark waters of one of the world's busiest shipping lanes. Two others were reported killed.

The remaining men are missing and believed trapped or dead inside the submarine's battered hull, 54 feet down.

The Truculent, a veteran of the Pacific, was rammed by the 643-ton Swedish tanker Divina, whose prows were built like a battering ram to withstand icepacks in northern waters.

Workmen Aboard Sub

An Admiralty statement said six officers, 52 seamen and 18 workmen from the Royal Naval dockyard at Chatham were aboard the Truculent.

Four officers and one enlisted man, who were on the bridge of the surfaced submarine, were hauled from the water by the Dutch merchant ship, Almdijk, which radioed the first word of the collision.

The Divina was reported to have picked up nine other survivors, who later were transferred to a Coast Guard lifeboat. Reports received immediately after the accident said the Divina was out of control.

Although there was no way to be certain, the 60 men aboard the Truculent still not accounted for were believed trapped in a steel tomb under water. A Navy spokesman announced shortly after midnight:

"The entire submarine life-saving organization is under way. 'Operation Sub-Smash' is a regular drill which has been frequently practiced and there is no reason to be pessimistic about any men who may be in the vessel alive."

Vessels equipped with the latest undersea rescue devices were sent to the scene.

Returning From Trial

The Truculent, with a displacement of more than 1000 tons, is one of the British T-types known as patrol submarines. It is believed to have Schnorkel equipment enabling submarines to remain underwater for long periods by floating air lines to the surface. In addition the ship carried enough underwater escape apparatus to enable every member of the crew to escape under normal conditions.

The Truculent at the time of the accident was returning from a trial run after a recent refitting. Survivors included the submarine's commander, Lieut. C. P. Bowers.

Several hours after the crash the shore remained almost completely fogbound. However, rescue vessels, on reaching the scene of the accident, reported a visibility of 2 to 3 miles.

The Truculent and the Divina slammed into each other about 17 miles northwest of Margarte and about 45 miles east of London. The Truculent went down near the Redsand Tower, an antiaircraft installation erected during the war.

The collision might prove to be the greatest peacetime submarine disaster since 1939. In that year

U S. Warned Against 'Ill Conceived' Steps That Would Deflect Ire Toward America

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson accused Russia yesterday of "detaching" vast areas of northern China and adding them to the Soviet Union.

He said the process was already complete in Outer Mongolia, almost complete in Manchuria, and well under way in Inner Mongolia and in Sinkiang, the enormous province of China's northwest.

"This is the single most significant fact in the relation of any foreign power with Asia," he told the National Press Club in a long and wide-ranging review of American policies toward Asia.

Will Turn Wrath On Russia

He foresaw the day when the Chinese people would turn their wrath on Russia, and said the United States must not say or do anything that would turn Chinese attention from what Russia was doing.

Jabbing repeatedly at his Republican critics without naming them, he warned against "the folly of ill-conceived adventures" that would deflect the anger of the Chinese people away from Russia and toward the United States.

Although he saw no immediate threat to the American military position in the Japan-to-Philippines area, he announced for the first time that the United States wanted to keep Okinawa and the other Ryukyu islands under a United Nations trusteeship.

As for the countries to the south of China, from Indonesia to Pakistan, he outlined no new American assistance, and said the United States could help Asia "only where we are wanted and only where the conditions of help are really sensible and possible."

First Such Talk Since War

His speech was the first full-length discussion of American relations with Asia by any Secretary of State since the war. He chose to speak extemporaneously, glancing only now and then at brief outline notes.

Although he knew the "Voice of America" was recording his speech for worldwide broadcasts, although the tobacco smoke and heat in the packed Press Club auditorium were almost suffocating, he seldom fumbled for a word and kept the outlines of his speech clear from start to finish. It was a feat that won him a standing ovation when it was all over.

He began his argument by stressing the diversity of the peoples of Asia—a diversity so great that not even "the most utter charla-

Barkley Says His Marriage Started Trend

Truman Pledges He'll Uphold Democratic Platform All His Life

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Vice President Barkley, answering a jibe by Speaker Rayburn, pictured himself last night as a sort of pilot bridegroom.

"I started a trend in this country," he said, and to the delight of President Truman and a host of other Democrats went on to list marriages that have taken place since his own.

He mentioned those of Clark Gable, Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, and Dick Tracy. In addition, he listed Miss Drucie Snyder, daughter of Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Snyder, who is soon to be married. Even the Methodist clergyman who married him and Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley, the Veep said, has "caved in" and is about to become a bridegroom.

"And I swear," Barkley added, "I don't think Sam Rayburn can resist the trend any longer. I hope not."

The occasion was a buffet dinner at the Shoreham, arranged by the Democratic National Committee to

Truman Denies Coal Crisis

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

In the face of a growing clamor for White House action, President Truman yesterday flatly declared that there is no national emergency in coal for the present.

The President thus indicated that he would sit tight in the coal industry dispute between John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers and the operators, and make no move to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act—a step demanded by Republican leaders in Congress and some Democrats as well.

Mr. Truman's reassertion of his position in the coal controversy came in reply to a direct question asked at his press conference. His answer was quick and sharp.

A check of governmental sources by a Post reporter indicated that President Truman had ample statistical support for his stand that no national emergency exists.

Bureau of Mines coal statistics for September, October, and November of 1949—the latest available figures—reveal that the Nation's retail consumers, including the home users, were delivered 23 percent more coal than for the same period of last year. Yet, the September-October-November period for 1949 was as warm, or warmer, than the same three heating-season months of 1948, according to Weather Bureau statistics.

These figures would indicate, some officials point out, that the retail coal consumers have been oversupplying themselves with Action came after the committee quizzed Sherman and Navy Secretary Frank Matthews as to their views on disciplining naval officers for expressing opinions contrary to official policy before congressional committees.

Sherman replied that he'd not only oppose any punishment but would do everything he could to protect officers in such situations, provided they were asked for their personal views and made it plain what was the official attitude and what was their own.

Secretary Matthews declared he is opposed to attempts to "censor"

Apartment Blast Kills 2 Mothers And 3 Children

Vincennes, Ind., Jan. 12 (U.P.).—An explosion shattered apartments in a housing project today, and authorities said at least five persons—two mothers and their three young children—were killed. It was feared other bodies were in the wreckage.

The blast occurred two blocks from a Wabash River levee where 1000 soldiers were stationed to fight rising flood waters. The troops aided the search for victims. The dead: Mrs. Granville Cooper and two children, and Mrs. Wiliam Overfelt and one child.

The explosion ripped three units of the Bowman Terrace housing project shortly before 4 p. m. Authorities blamed a natural gas furnace. One two-family unit was wrecked and two more, one of which caught fire, were damaged.

55 Witnesses Appear to Ask Interstate Ban on Liquor Ads

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Old Times—and that's not a brand of whiskey—returned to the Senate caucus room yesterday, when dry workers from every State demanded a law barring liquor advertising from interstate commerce.

Oldtimers said the crowd was one of the largest ever to gather for a liquor hearing, and marked the high point of the post-prohibition dry efforts to limit liquor advertising.

They came with 45 witnesses to plead their case, but during the day added 10 others.

Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) said the committee hopes to complete the list of drys today. Then the wets will be heard. Their witnesses numbered 53 last night, made up of brewers, distillers, publishers, advertising agents and labor leaders.

The hearing started with Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) who authored the proposed measure, reporting that there is an "overwhelming demand" for it. The same bill had been offered in 1947 and 1948 by former Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.), who yesterday telegraphed his support.

Supporters, led by Bishop Wilbur E. Hammaker, 100 Maryland ave. ne., chairman of the Methodist Board of Temperance and Public Morals, included a

Gruening Here, Calls Alaska Defenseless

By John London
Post Reporter

Governor of Alaska Ernest Gruening warned here last night that "Alaska continues defenseless and could be taken tomorrow by a minor scale airborne invasion."

"What is needed for the minimal defense of Alaska," he said, "is a complete radar screen already authorized, housing to take care of ground troops to hold our airports in the event of a parachute attack and enough planes and air personnel to intercept and destroy any air attack directed at the northwest coast of the United States and passing over Alaska."

Pointing out that Alaska is "the only portion of the American continent within naked eye view of our totalitarian neighbor . . . and the only part of the American continent that was invaded and for a time held by Japan in World War II," he said:

"It seems incredible that we should have to plead and fight and beg for minimum defense requirements."

Gruening flew down from Juneau, Alaska, yesterday to be principal speaker at a mass meeting at the Hotel Statler of the All America Defense Association, originally formed about three months ago by the Seattle, Wash., Chamber of Commerce to oppose proposed relocation of war industries from the Great Lakes and Northwest areas to the Midwest.

Gruening cautioned that while

Smathers Enters Race for Senate Against Pepper

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 12 (AP).—Representative George Smathers (D., Fla.) announced tonight he would seek the Senate seat of Claude Pepper.

"We must decide," he said, "whether we will continue up the good road of opportunity and freedom or will be led down the dark road of socialism and communism by political Pied Pipers who attempt to buy our ballots with our own Treasury.

"There are today in the United States more Communists than there were in Russia at the time of the Communist revolution.

"I want it distinctly understood that I stand for election on the principle of the free state against the jail state."

On specific issues, Smathers stated:

"Wherever this political medicine (national health insurance) has been tried, it has failed.

"Better relations will not be achieved by the adoption of any laws which seek to coerce association between the races . . . I believe in unions and collective bargaining. I voted against the original Hartley bill because it was too extreme. I voted for the Taft-Hartley bill as a temperate measure."

Both Sides Attack New Housing Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A bipartisan attack on the Administration's new middle-income housing program as placing a premium on cooperative housing was launched yesterday as the Senate Banking Subcommittee opened hearings.

Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) was the first to open fire on the bill designed to spur construction of homes for persons earning from $2700 to $4400 a year.

The Illinois Senator asked Raymond M. Foley, housing and home finance administrator, to explain why the interest rates for cooperatives under the new program should be 2½ percent, when regular FHA loans were made at interest rates of 4½ percent and loans under the GI Bill of Rights were made at 4 percent.

Douglas "Fed Up"

When Foley said he would take up the issue later in his testimony, Douglas snapped that he was "fed up" with people in the executive department coming up to "lay down the law" to Congress.

"Why don't we just let these executive people take over and pass their own legislation?" Douglas demanded.

Later in the afternoon Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), serving his last day on the committee, entered the fray.

"I maintain that we are encouraging people to live in a group society under this bill," said Cain.

8 Million in Group

Cain insisted that under the bill the Government was simply saying to citizens that they could get 25 percent cheaper rents if they decided to build and live in cooperatives. Foley demurred that this was not quite the situation.

Under Cain's questioning it was brought out that there are some eight million families in the United States in the middle-income group. The measure provides for contruction of 250,000 units, Foley said.

Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) of the full committee, who introduced the bill for the Administration, said that so far as he was concerned he would favor no legislation giving any group an advantage over veterans

Cain said there were eight million persons in the middle-income group and eight million below it—in the low-income group for whose benefit legislation had already been passed. That means, Cain asserted, that we have come to the day when 16 out of 24 million Americans, in order to have adequate housing, must get it through the assistance of the Federal Government.

Replaced by Ives

Cain, a vigorous opponent of Administration policies, was replaced on the committee yesterday by Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), a liberal Republican.

Foley told the committee the middle income group was not being cared for under Section 608, emergency large-scale FHA rental projects. To support that, he cited building figures in Washington during the first six months of 1949 under that section. Of a total of 13,853 units built under this provision, none was constructed to rent for under $50. None was built to rent under $59.50, Foley said.

In the rental bracket of $60 to $69.99, Foley declared, 15.4 percent were constructed. Thirty-three and eight-tenths percent were built to rent from $70 to $70.99 and 21.6 percent from $80 to $89.99.

In the $90 to $99.99 bracket, 19.4 percent were constructed; in the $100 to $109.99, 2.7 percent; in the $110 to $124.99, 4.4 percent, and in the bracket over $125, 2.7 percent.

bring about a meeting of President Truman and his Cabinet with Democratic members of the Senate and House. All elements of the party were on hand—Fair Dealers, Dixiecrats and Senator Glen Taylor of Idaho, who was Henry Wallace's running mate on the Progressive Party ticket in 1948.

Mr. Truman made a brief talk in which he pledged himself to fight for the Democratic platform of 1948 as long as he lives. He said that the Democratic Party would never die, because it was the party of the people.

Will Stick to Platform

"The Democratic Party has a program," the Chief Executive said. "You were all at Philadelphia, and you know what that program is. I believe that a party platform means what it says. I am doing everything I can to carry out the platform of the Democratic Party, and I am going to keep fighting for that as long as I live."

Speaker Rayburn, who led off the oratory, told of the rivalry between himself and Vice President Barkley that started when they were House freshmen 37 years ago. He admitted Barkley had done pretty well since the time he moved over to the Senate. Then, alluding to Barkley's marriage, the Texan went on to say that he had done even better in the last two months.

"He's overdone himself," Rayburn said, amidst laughter.

Praises Truman Message

Barkley, replying to this a little later, said:

"All I've got to say is, speak for yourself, Sam, not for me."

Then came his remark that he didnt' see how Rayburn could long resist the "trend" that he himself had started on November 18. The Speaker lives with his spinster sister, "Miss Lou" Rayburn.

Barkley, switching to politics, said he had never heard a more logical, more orderly address than President Truman's State of the Union message. He said it outlined a forward-looking program that was free of crackpot ideas.

He recalled that in 1912 Woodrow Wilson said the Republican Party hadn't had a new idea in 40 years. Neither have they had a a new idea in the last 37 years, he said, making it 77 years altogether.

Speaker Rayburn had said he was "worried" about the Republican Party. If the GOP loses seats in the election this year, he said, it might pass out of existence, with the result that the country might have five or six parties.

"So," he said, "I hope that somebody in the Republican Party gets elected, and gives us a two-party system."

Vice President Barkley, touching on this later, said he would regret such a situation as exists in some European countries, where no party has a majority and splinter parties have to band together to form one.

President Truman, for his part, said:

"I hope that next year, after these fall elections, we will have a Democratic Party that represents the people of the United States, in the House of Representatives and in the Senate . . . you will have it in the Executive Office."

Representative Eberharter (D., Pa.) yesterday withdrew as a candidate for Federal judge.

Eberharter said he discussed the nomination to a Pennsylvania judgeship with President Truman yesterday and asked Mr. Truman not to submit his name to the Senate again.

Eberharter, whose action was not unexpected, said:

"I have reached this difficult decision by reason of the vicious, malicious and unfounded attacks made on me by large and selfish corporate interests."

His nomination was opposed by the American Bar Association.

After a number of sensational hearings in which Eberharter was accused of drunkenness and of otherwise being unfit for the post, a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee took no further action on the nomination.

Miller Introduces Bill on D. C. Welfare Powers

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) yesterday introduced a bill to strengthen the powers of the District Board of Public Welfare.

Miller, a member of the District committee, pointed out that the bill was similar to one he sponsored in the Eightieth Congress—it passed the House but died in the Senate.

He said the bill would give the District welfare setup a new basic statute with a clearer line of demarcation between the powers of the board and the powers of other agencies.

The bill goes to the District committee.

His condition was described as "satisfactory," and it was said he probably will be released from the hospital "in a day or two."

Coffee Price Rise Caused by Speculators, Probers Say

Investigators for the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee investigating high food costs said yesterday that recent sharp rise in coffee prices was due almost entirely to speculators.

Reports from the Commerce Department and the Office of International Trade also indicated that most of the increase came after the coffee left the country in which it was grown.

Green coffee at the port of export cost 24.9 cents a pound in May, 1947, the high for that year. In July, 1948, it reached 27.3 cents a pound.

Last November, when the recent increases in retail prices began, it was selling at the export ports at 29.1 cents—or less than 2 cents a pound higher than a year before and only 5 cents a pound above the high in 1947.

The committee pointed out, however, that retail prices have gone up to 85 cents a pound, a rise of from 25 to 30 cents a pound. Coffee that was bought in Brazil last November would not reach the retail market until next month, it was revealed.

Members of the subcommittee, headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), also reported widespread complaints from small coffee roasters over the operations of speculators in the New York coffee market.

State Department sources have informed the committee, Gillette said, that the estimated coffee crop in Brazil this year will be 15 million bags, compared with only 13 million last year.

"These figures almost entirely disprove the claim of an anticipated shortage, as Brazil produces the major portion of our coffee," Gillette said.

Oleo Tax Repeal Vote Is Unlikely This Week

Debate on the bill to abolish Federal taxes on oleomargarine droned on in the Senate yesterday, with both sides expressing willingness for an early vote, but not doing anything about it.

Supporters of a substitute for the committee bill—which would abolish all taxes but also would bar the shipment of yellow margarine in interstate commerce—agreed on an amendment by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) to bar oleo advertising picturing cow pastures or otherwise indicating it might be butter.

Little chance was seen for a vote on the proposal until next week. Democratic leadership had hoped for a vote today.

U. N. Delays Voting On Nationalist Ouster

Lake Success, Jan. 12 (AP).—Russia's Jacob A. Malik came back to the United Nations Security Council today. But he made it clear he will walk out again—as he did Tuesday—if the Council beats down his demand to oust the Nationalist China delegation.

Other members made it equally clear they are not yet ready to kick out the Nationalists and open the way for Red China to join the council.

Malik in a 26-minute speech attacked Nationalist Delegate T. F. Tsiang and repeatedly demanded the Council toss him out immediately.

The Council adjourned without reaching a decision. A vote is expected Friday.

American Delegate Ernest A. Gross told the Council the U. S. would vote against the Soviet resolution calling for Tsiang's ouster; that the U. S. considers such a vote would not be a veto; and that the U. S. is ready to do whatever the majority of the Security Council wants about the Nationalist China delegation.

Informed sources here pointed out the U. S. thus would go along with any seven-member majority of the 11-nation Council and would not recognize a veto on the Russian resolution.

Tsiang indicated he regarded the Soviet move as one where he could use China's "big power" veto, but there is no definite information Tsiang will cast a veto if and when seven countries vote against him.

But Fight Rages

Nationalists Deny Hainan Invasion Tale

Taipei, Formosa, Jan. 12 (U.P.)—A Nationalist military spokesman said today Nationalist troops are battling guerillas on Hainan Island but there have been "no landings whatsoever" by Communist invasion forces.

The semi-official newspaper New Life Daily said Red army troops had landed on Hainan and established a substantial beachhead with the aid of guerillas. The Nationalist spokesman said fighting was "in all directions."

Nationalist reinforcements reportedly were still arriving on Hainan, including 30 planes, but weather hampered bombing operations.

Reds Say Air Bombs Hit 21 Persons in Shanghai

London (Friday) Jan. 13 (U.P.). The Soviet Tass news agency reported from Shanghai today that two waves of bombers had attacked Shanghai January 11 and killed or injured 21 persons.

Tass said bombs were dropped in the Yangtzepoo district and 34 workshops were destroyed. A Tass dispatch yesterday reported 62 persons were killed in a Chinese Nationalist bombing attack on Shanghai January 7.

British Nations Look for U. S. To Aid East

Colombo, Ceylon, Jan. 12 (AP).—A self-aid program to develop British Commonwealth resources and raise living standards, particularly in southeast Asia, was presented today to the Commonwealth Foreign Ministers Conference.

The plan, advanced by Australia, does not envisage a trading bloc, but looks to technical as well as monetary aid and is similar to President Truman's Point 4 plan for backward areas. Delegates indicated it was hoped the United States might join in assistance to southeast Asia.

In discussions on French Indo-China, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India was alone in declaring that support of the French-sponsored Bao Dai government of Viet Nam was unwise now.

Nehru said Bao Dai would have difficulty establishing an indepdent government and deplored the French colonial system. Except for India, there was agreement the Bao Dai government should be recognized when its agreement with the French is signed.

Jap Reds Hit At Cominform

Tokyo, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Japanese Communist Party today officially set its top strategist, Sanzo Nozaka, on the way to becoming the Orient's first "Tito."

There were too many unanswered questions to determine immediately whether the move was genuine or an elaborate plant—but on paper it looked convincing.

The Cominform, dominating organization of international communism, last week attacked Nozaka as a tool of the "imperialist occupiers" of Japan. Pravda, official Communist paper in Moscow, echoed the accusations.

The Japanese Communist Party today cracked back. The party's political bureau said the Cominform conclusions were "unacceptable to the popular masses and that "Comrade Nozaka enjoys the confidence of the masses as the boldest patriot of the people."

AF Jet Pilots Claim New Speed Record

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Three Kirtland Air Force Base jet pilots today claimed the unofficial world's speed record.

Capt. Robert Stevens and Lieuts. Milton Whitford and John R. Spaulding said they flew the 325 miles between Tucson, Ariz., and here yesterday in 27½ minutes. That would be an average speed of 710 to 711 miles an hour. They were flying F-86 Sabre-jet fighters.

The previous unofficial mark was set by Maj. Frank Everest, who clocked 710 miles an hour in an F-86 flight from Dayton, Ohio, to Washington, D. C., last February. The official record in the same plane is 670.981.

U. S. Destroyer Trails Arrow, Fearing Blast

By Wayne Richardson

Aboard Flying Arrow, Jan. 12 (AP).—Escorted by the U. S. destroyer Baussell, this shot-riddled American freighter headed tonight for the mine-free Chinese Communist port of Tsingtao on Shantung Peninsula.

The Flying Arrow, blasted by Nationalist shells, had to get underway from her anchorage off Shanghai. Capt. David Jones feared her No. 5 hold would explode.

Water used to extinguish a fire in the hold caused expansion of the cargo of jute, baled cotton and caustic soda. Her master said the danger of an explosion was so pressing he considered it dangerous to wait and try to get into Chinese Nationalist blockaded and demined Red Shanghai.

(In Washington, the Navy said the Baussell is escorting the Flying Arrow to Tsingtao to provide "protection." Presumably this means the destroyer will intervene if Nationalist warships again attempt to attack it in international waters.)

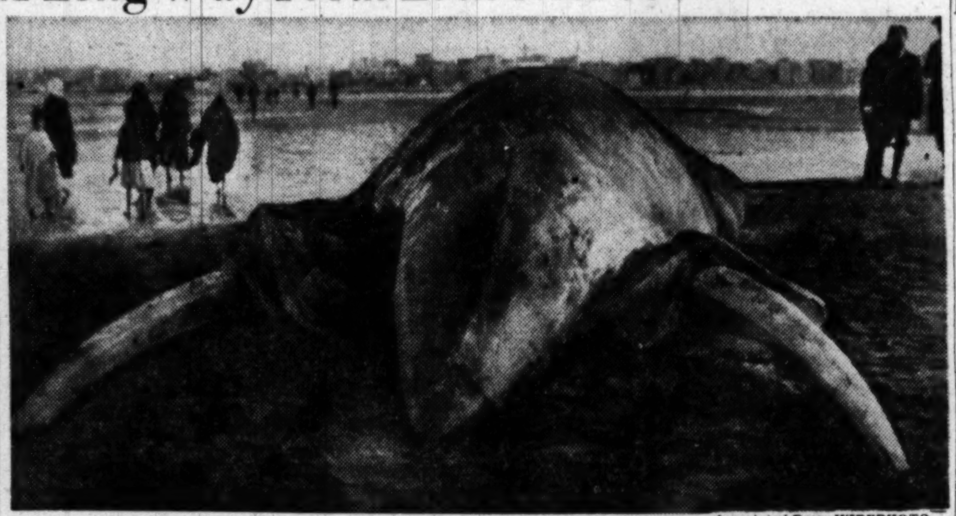
Moran, Ex-Child Actor, Placed on Probation

Chicago, Jan. 12 (AP).—Jackie Moran, 26, former child movie actor was placed on two years' Federal probation today for driving a stolen car from Florida to South Carolina.

Moran, now John E. Moran, played "Huckleberry Finn" in a motion picture version of Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer."

In granting probation on a plea of guilty, Judge Michael L. Igoe ordered that he should not be extradited to other States to face possible bad check charges. Moran has made a start toward rehabilitation, Judge Igoe said.

A Long Way From Loch Ness . . .



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THE MONSTER OF SUEZ—The Monster of Loch Ness is more highly publicized, but this nightmarish something can lay claim to not only having been seen, but photographed. It turned up on the beach at Ataka, Egypt, after a three-day gale in the Gulf of Suez. Its tusks reminded spectators of a walrus or elephant. Even experts were puzzled

Give Point 4 Aid Through U. N., Witnesses Urge House Group

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

A farmer and a Quaker yesterday urged that aid under President Truman's "Point Four' program be channeled through the U. N. while an educator suggested paying its cost from defense funds.

Delbert Replogle, representing the Friends' committee, told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that the United States had a "moral and selfish" duty to help backward areas and peoples. But, he added, the United States "should work in concert with other like-minded people" and that the best approach would be through the U. N. There is in the world, he declared, much suspicion of United States motives which would be minimized by working through the international body.

"If we do," interposed Representative Judd (R., Minn.(, "our program would be neither bold nor new. All we would need to do would be to give the money."

Replogle, a New Jersey manufacturer who represented the U. N. in the Middle East, insisted the aid bill as now written would not satisfy the Society of Friends. He said it should specify action through the U. N. with a specification that the President could put its provisions into effect without the U. N. if that body would not go along.

J. T. Sanders, legislative counsel for the National Grange, said the program should be channeled through the U. N. so other Nations could bear their share of the cost. A former official of UNNRA, Sanders declared the United States should "abandon wholesale charity as soon as possible."

Frank Laubach, representing the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, suggested the cost of Point Four aid might come out of funds now being appropriated for national defense. The United States, he declared, is losing the cold war and predicted loss of great areas of Asia and Africa to communism unless steps were taken to win it.

Says We're Losing War

"Chaos is the enemy," he said, "and hope, progress and contentment are the weapons. We are losing this war, we are retreating at the present moment because we have not been using the right weapons. The military men are getting ready for the next war but are not using the weapons for this war."

Laubach, who said he had spent 20 years battling illiteracy in 61 countries, said the Communists were playing into the hands of the United States by "stirring up the longing of the people of backward countries but scaring their governments."

"In other words," said Judd, "we must do what the Communists promise."

Laubach agreed. "They stir up desire," he said, "and we must fulfill it."

Today the committee will hear Paul C. Hoffman, head of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Confidence Vote, 90 to 69, Approves Finnish Pay Raise

Helsinki, Finland, Jan. 12 (AP).—Finland's parliament by a 90-to-69 vote of confidence today approved general wage increases agreed to by Premier Karl-August Fagerholm's cabinet.

It was the fifth vote of confidence the cabinet has won in its year and a half history.

The Social Democrat government had ordered a 7.5 percent general wage increase after the Trade Union Federation asked for a 10 percent raise. Conservatives opposed the move in a 15-hour debate which preceded the voting.

Civil Service Says Pierce Not Employe

A Civil Service Commission spokesman said yesterday that Bryant O. Pierce, 35, of 316 18th pl. ne., who was acquitted Wednesday of a larceny after trust charge, was never connected with the commission.

After his acquittal, Pierce told a reporter that he had been a field representative "under" the CSC. The spokesman said that Pierce, according to their records, had worked for the War Department, the War Assets Administration, the Agriculture Department, and the Naional Advisory Committee for Aeronautics but not for the CSC.

Russia Taking Over China Areas

tan" could believe there could be a single policy for all.

But, he said, there is a developing Asian consciousness based on two pretty nearly common factors: the first, a revulsion against the acceptance of poverty and misery as the normal condition of life; and the second, a revulsion against foreign domination, either by colonialism or imperialism.

He recalled that seven nations with 500 million people had won their independnece in Asia since the war.

He said the people of Asia were determined to direct their own lives and, if necessary, to make their own mistakes. From this he swung into a discussion of why the Nationalist Government fell in China.

The Secretary asked critics of his policies "to stop looking for a moment under the bed and under the chair and under the rug to find out the reasons."

"The broad picture," he said, "is that after the war, Chiang Kai-shek emerged as the undisputed leader of the Chinese people. He had overwhelming military power, greater military power than any ruler had ever had in the entire history of China. He had tremendous economic and military support and backing from the United States.

"Four years later, what do we find? We find that his armies have melted away. His support in the country has melted away. His support largely outside the country has melted away and he is a refugee on a small island off the coast of China with the remnants of his forces.

"No one says vast armies moved out of the hills and defeated him. To attribute this to the inadequacy of American aid is only to point out the depth and the power of the forces which were miscalculated or ignored.

"What has happened in my judgment is that the almost inexhaustible patience of the Chinese people in their misery ended. They did not bother to overthrow this government. There was really nothing to overthrow. They simply ignored it throughout the country.

"The Communists did not create this condition. They did not create this revolutionary spirit. But they were shrewd and cunning to mount it, to ride this thing into victory and into power."

He dealt next with the attitude of the American people toward China, recalling that Americans had gone there for generations as missionaries, doctors, teachers or traders. He recalled, too, that for 50 years the profound belief of the American people had been "that foreign control of China was contrary to American interests."

He thought it was putting the cart before the horse, and doing great damage to the American position in Asia, to say that the real interest of the United States is to stop the spread of communism.

"Of course we are interested in stopping the spread of communism," he argued. "But we are interested for a far deeper reason than any conflict between the Soviet Union and the United States.

"Communism . . . is really the spearhead of Russian imperialism which would, if it could, take from these people what they have won, what we want them to keep and develop—which is their own national independence . . ."

The best way to stop communism in Asia ,he said, was "to do just exactly what the peoples of Asia want to do and what we want to help them to do"—namely, to develop their newly independent governments and their resources and skills so they can resist Communist penetration.

He then contrasted the American attitude with the Soviet seizures of Chinese territory in the northern areas. "We must not seize the unenviable position the Russians have carved out for themselves," he declared.

"We must take the position that anyone who violates the integrity of China is an enemy of China," he said.

"This is the first and greatest rule in the formulation of American policy.

"The second is to keep our purposes perfectly straight, pure and above board, and not get them mixed up with legal quibbles."

Dealing with the military picture in the Far East, Acheson said:

American defenses of the Japanese islands "must and shall be maintained."

The United States will, "at an appropriate time," offer to hold the Ryukyus under a U. N. trusteeship; and will continue to cary out existing commitments to dfeend the Philippines.

But south and west of the Philippines, he said, the United States was only one of many nations that could "do no more than help"—if help was wanted.

"American assistance can be effective when it is the missing component in a situation which might otherwise be solved," he explained. "The United States cannot furnish the determination, the will and the loyalty of a people to its government."

Answering questions at the end of his speech, Acheson commented acidly on the charge, made by Senator Taft and others, that American policy in Greece and in China was inconsistent. "The United States, in my judgment, acts in regard to a foreign nation strictly in regard to American interests or those wider interests which affect American interests," was his reply. "And if it is to American interests, or those wider interests which affect it, to do one thing in one country and another thing in another country, then that is the consistency upon which I propose to advise the President.

"I am not the slightest bit worried because somebody can say, 'Well, you said so-and-so about Greece, why isn't all of this true about China?' I will be polite, I will be patient and I will try to explain why Greece is not China—but my heart will not be in that battle.

"Therefore, what I think we should all do is to look at the problem before us. Don't bounce it off another problem somewhere else, but hit it directly and say 'What is the common sense thing from the point of view of American interest, to do here?'"

Acheson's Picture of Lands Around China

In his speech yesterday Secretary Acheson summed up the situation and the prospects in the countries around China. Here, country by country, is the picture he drew:

JAPAN—Gen. Douglas MacArthur has been successful in settling up non-militaristic political institutions, but less successful in the economic field. The Japanese must have freedom to buy and sell their goods on the mainland of Asia and elsewhere.

KOREA—The Administration is asking Congress to continue American help until the new Korean republic is firmly established.

PHILIPPINES—Much of the two billion dollars received from the United States since VJ-Day "has not been used as wisely as we wish it had been used." If help continues to be misused, it should be stopped; otherwise the United States is always ready to help and advise.

BURMA—The situation is highly confused and difficult, with five different factions utterly disrupting the government.

INDO-CHINA—The French are making slow but noticeable progress in transferring power and getting the people to support the new local administration.

MALAYA—The British "have been and are discharging their responsibility harmoniously with the people of Malaya and are making progress."

INDONESIA—Dutch and Indonesians showed great statesmanship in the recent settlement; the situation is "full of encouragement although it is full of difficulty also."

INDIA AND PAKISTAN—"Really grave troubles" are facing these countries because of their continuing quarrels. Although both have promised not to resort to war, the problems in this area are "most inflammable," and the United States believes "there should be some accommodation of wills to bring about a result as soon as possible."

Schools Use Glycol Vapor

Alexander School, Silver Spring, Maryland, and Kalorama Day School have installed A.P.S. Glycol Vapor Rolls to reduce the infections airborne bacteria and viruses that may cause colds, measles, mumps, scarlet fever, flu and other respiratory infections.

By the use of the A.P.S. Vapor Rolls they hope to prevent cross infections from one pupil to another.

Triethylene Glycol Vapor is odorless, tasteless, non-toxic and invisible, it will not injure fabrics or paintings.

School rooms are the source of many cross infections of children's diseases but with the proper use of triethylene glycol vapor, the probability of airborne infections may be reduced.

The A.P.S. Vapor Roll is distributed in this territory by Health Equipment & Service Corp., 904 Bonifant Street, Silver Spring Maryland. Your inquiries are invited.

Unions Rebuff Labor Party

London, Jan. 12 (NYHT).—The Labor government received a shock today when trade union delegates voted against an absolute wage freeze until next January 1.

The general council of the Trades Union Congress, which in effect is the government's agent, received 4,263,000 votes in support of its wage-freeze policy, formulated in collaboration with Sir Stafford Cripps and other cabinet ministers.

But a favorable margin of only 657,000 votes gave the council a hollow victory and indicates the wage standstill policy is doomed. The vote was 3,606,000 against. A two-thirds majority is necessary for a real victory.

British Sub Rammed and Sunk in Thames Estuary between May 23 and June 15 three subs—the American Squalus, the British Thetis and the French Phenix—sank, taking 196 men to their doom.

The Truculent was built during the war and operated against the Japanese in the Pacific. Vickers Armstrong began construction of the vessel in December, 1941. She was completed December 31, 1942.

Once while on patrol in the Pacific with more than 30 captured Japanese aboard, the Truculent attacked a Japanese convoy. Escort subchasers of the convoy forced the Truculent to crash-dive. She hit sea bottom at 58 feet but survived depth charges dropped all around her.

Reds Use U. S. Missionaries, Italy Declares

Rome, Jan. 12 (AP).—A spokesman for Italy's Interior Ministry declared today Communists are about the only Italians who join Protestant sects and that American Protestant activities in this predominantly Roman Catholic nation often aid communism.

The United States embassy here and officials in Washington have been advised of this view, the spokesman said, of difficulties encountered here recently by 13 young American Church of Christ evangelists.

Some of the group reported they were stoned from Castel Gandolfo last month.

Cline R. Paden, one of the evangelists, said the evangelists' interest is not in politics and "no charge of communism can be truthfully brought against us."

"Our only interest now," he said, "is to settle the problem of our orphanage and visas."

Interior Minister Mario Scelba said he arranged a three-month extension of the evangelists' permits to stay in Italy.

The interior ministry spokesman said "there is no reason to justify permanent visas for the Church of Christ evangelists here."

No orphanage is needed at Frascati and no Protestant sect ever before has taken it activities to "the Pope's back yard," the spokesman said. He described the ministry's attitude as "not religious persecution, but a legitimate preoccupation at American proselyting that usually ends by favoring communism."

French Seize Fifty Poles

Paris, Jan. 12 (NYHT).—"About 50" Polish citizens were seized early today in Paris and the provinces and an undetermined number will be expelled from France, Pierre Berteaux, head of the French Security Policy, announced today.

Berteaux said the Poles were being questioned for "abusing the hospitality and tolerance of France" and for "meddling in French politics."

The Ministry of the Interior refused to confirm reports some of the Poles already had been escorted to the French border at Strasbourg and expelled.

[The Associated Press reported from Warsaw that police there arrested several Frenchmen, presumably in retaliation for the arrest of Poles in France.]

5590 Visitors See Vienna Art Exhibit

Visiting hours at the gallery are from 10 to 5 p. m. weekdays and 2 to 10 p. m. Sundays. The exhibition ends January 22.

De Gasperi Hands in His Resignation

Rome, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Premier Alcide de Gasperi formally resigned today, and government sources said he would be given a mandate to form a new cabinet Friday night or Saturday morning.

President Luigi Einaudi declined to accept the resignation immediately. He said he wanted to talk first with other political leaders, whom he saw throughout the day. They were former Provisional President Enrico de Nicola; Ivanoe Bonomi, a former premier; Giovanni Gronchi, president of the Chamber of Deputies; Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza; rightwing Socialist leader Giuseppe Saragat and former Premier Francesco Nitti.

Tomorrow, Einaudi will call on Vittorio Orlando, 89-year-old former premier, at his home.

De Gasperi, who has headed the government for more than four years, resigned in a two-hour conference with Einaudi. His purpose, according to government sources, merely was to realign and strengthen his cabinet.

Farouk to Make Rival Envoy

Athens, Greece, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Zaki Hachem, the frail and subdued Egyptian economist who reportedly lost his financee to playboy King Farouk, said tonight he would become Egypt's Minister to Russia this spring.

Hachem, 27, refused to discuss details of his unhappy love affair. He admitted he had been through a "nerve shattering experience" that also cost him his job at United Nations.

Hachem was engaged to 16-year-old Narriman Sadek and planned to marry her in December. There were reports that recently divorced Farouk saw her and was so smitten by her beauty that he decided to wed her himself.

Hachem, here en route to Lake Success, said reports of the incident abroad had forced him to give up his United Nations job. He expects to remain in Lake Success for three months and then go to Moscow.

W&OD R. R. Conviction On Zoning to Be Studied

Richmond, Va., Jan. 12 (AP).—A case in which the Washington and Old Dominion Railroad was fined for erecting a coal trestle on its right of way in violation of a zoning ordinance of the city of Alexandria will be reviewed by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

The case was appealed from the Alexandria Corporation Court, where the railroad was fined $10 when found guilty of violating the zoning ordinance.

Shapiro to Testify At Coplon Hearing

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Department of Justice attorney with which Judith Coplon admits staying overnight in hotels is going to appear as a witness in her pretrial hearing.

Archibald Palmer, Miss Coplon's attorney in her espionage conspiracy trial, today asked the Government to produce Harold Shapiro for questioning.

Shapiro wasn't called to the stand during Miss Coplon's trial in Washington when she was convicted of stealing Government documents. During the proceedings, the girl admitted going to hotels with Shapiro but denied there was anything improper in her relations with the 28-year-old attorney.

John M. Kelley, special assistant to the Attorney General, agreed to have Shapiro in court tomorrow. Shapiro is employed in the Department of Justice in Washington.

Palmer told the court he wanted to hear from "Shapiro's own lips" whether he sat "with an FBI man next to him' 'and engaged Miss Coplon in conversation for the sake of producing evidence.

Miss Coplon is accused with Valentin A. Gubitchev, a Russian engineer, of conspiring to make United States defense secrets available to Russia.

Gubitchev's attorney, Abraham L. Pomerantz, disclosed today that he had subpenaed Keith McHugh, president of the New York Telephone Co., to appear as a witness tomorrow.

Pomerantz claims Gubitchev's telephone was tapped before February 1, 1949, when the Government says its agents began listening to the Russian's telephone talks.

Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan asked Palmer if his purpose in calling Shapiro to the stand was to find out if the Justice Department attorney acted as a "stool pigeon."

Palmer replied he had hesitated to use that term, but wanted to determine whether Government wire taps were the result of Shapiro's working with Government agents.

Shapiro's name was mentioned in Miss Coplon's first trial when the prosecution asked her if she had spent the nights of January 7 and 8, 1949, with Shapiro in hotels in Baltimore and Philadelphia. She admitted going to the hotels with Shapiro.

Judge Ryan said yesterday that testimony by Shapiro on the "hotel episodes" would be admitted on a "limited scale."

Another Witness for Hiss Calls Chambers 'Psychopathic'

New York, Jan. 12 (NYHT).—A Harvard psychologist today gave the same diagnosis of the mental condition of Whittaker Chambers as had previously been given by a New York psychiatrist—that he is suffering from a "psychopathic personality" characterized by a tendency to tell lies and make false accusations.

Dr. Henry A. Murray, lecturer in psychology at Harvard and former director of the Harvard Psychological Clinic, dissected the personality of Chambers for more than an hour from the witness stand in the second perjury trial of Alger Hiss. Chambers is the key prosecution witness.

Dr. Murray talked almost in classroom style, with relatively few interruptions from counsel for either side while he was dealing with this subject. At the end of his direct testimony, which lasted altogether a little over two and a half hours, Thomas F. Murphy, assistant United States attorney, said to the court:

Murray, Binger Compared

"Dr. Murray cited substantially all the symptoms of the "psycopathic personality" which Dr. Carl A. L. Binger, the defense psychiatrist, had cited in the previous four days of testimony. He also added a few additional symptoms. One was the use by Chambers in his writings of "a higher proportion of images of disintegration and destruction, filth and dirt, decay and decomposition and death than in any writings I have ever examined."

"He also said that although the use of false names and variations of a name was common among psycopaths, he had never before known a psycopath to use more than four, whereas he counted 14 used by Chambers.

"Your honor, my head is running around so fast I just could not competently cross-examine this witness just now. I'm just too upset. May we have an adjournment?"

Judge Henry W. Goddard looked at the clock, which stood at 3:20 p. m., and said: "We could take a recess for 15 minutes. Would that give you time?"

Another Defense Witness

Defense Counsel Claude B. Cross offered to put another witness on the stand so as to delay the cross-examination of Dr. Murray still further, and Murphy accepted this arrangement.

Dr. James T. Shotwell, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and former professor of the history of international relations at Columbia University, then appeared as a character witness. His testimony lasted the rest of the day. Murphy will cross-examine Dr. Murray tomorrow, after which the defense will rest its case.

After rebuttal, sur-rebuttal, summations and charge the case is expected to go to the jury late next week.

D. C. Senate Unit Ousts Aide

Johnston (D., S. C.) ranking majority member of the District Committee.

Charles Bragman, 41, also appointed to the professional staff at the request of Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.).

Pepper, newest Democratic member of the District group, joined it last fall at the request of Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.).

Mrs. Margaret Hampton, former administrative assistant to Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), who asked her appointment to the staff of the District Committee, of which he is a member.

Retained in their positions were: Robert H. Mollohan, chief clerk, picked for the post last fall by Senator Neely.

J. George Stewart, who joined the staff as chief clerk under Senator Buck, and who now continues as top staff member for the Republican minority.

Mrs. Ruth Bryant, a secretary, who has been on the staff since 1947.

Mrs. Anna Monat, also a secretary, who was named to her job last year.

The staff shakeup was ordered by a vote of the District committee in an executive afternoon session.

Chairman Neely said the entire action was unanimous.

Republican members expressed satisfaction with the move.

The organization as announced leaves one question open—who wil succeed Mollohan as chief clerk if he leaves by his own choice to become United States Marshal for the northern district of West Virginia?

Groundwork for the shake-up was laid last fall after Senator Neely took over the chairmanship from J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) when the latter left the Senate to be United States Attorney General.

In an executive session, the committee followed Neely's lead and agreed to demand the resignation of all members of the staff as it then existed. Mollohan succeeded Wheeler as chief clerk and Wheeler stayed on as acting counsel, succeeding James R. Kirkland, who was appointed a judge of District Court.

Wheeler, like Van Arkel, is in private law practice here. The District committee counsel's job pays more than $10,000—the other two professional staff jobs filled yesterday, around $7000, Neely said.

A native of Des Moines, Iowa, van Arkel, who is 42, attended schools in Haddonfield, N. J., a suburb of Philadelphia, and graduated from Princeton in 1929. After a year's study abroad on a fellowship, he entered Harvard Law School and received his degree in 1933.

He joined the legal staff of the National Labor Reltaions Board in 1934 and served there until 1942, when he left for war service with the Office of Strategic Services. He served with the OSS in North Africa and Europe from 1943 through 1945, then returned to the NRLB as general counsel. He left the agency in 1947 to begin private law practice here. He has specialized in representing labor unions. He is married and lives at 2001 Foxhall rd. nw.

Bragman, 41, is a former chief adjudicator of the Railroad Retirement Board. Born in London of American parents, he grew up in New York and graduated from New York University in 1932. He later took graduate work at Columbia University and at the Graduate School of the Department of Agriculture.

He came to Washington in 1934 as assistant to the chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board, and worked for the agency until 1942. He then served with OPA and with the War Labor Board.

In 1945, he joined the staff of the Senate subcommittee on wartime health and education problems, with Senator Pepper as chairman, and has continued since with Senator Pepper. He is married and has two children. He lives in Arlington Village.

Appeal NLRB Cases, Denham Tells Bosses

The long-smoldering feud between General Counsel Robert N. Denham and the National Labor Relations Board flared into the open yesterday.

Denham charged, in effect, that the board was undercutting the Taft-Hartley Act with pro-labor rulings. He urged employers not to accept adverse NLRB decisions, but to appeal them to the higher Federal courts.

The NLRB general counsel aired his charges, and issued the litigation invitation, before the Building Trades Employers' Association of New York City, meeting at the Waldorf Astoria.

Ever since the Taft-Hartley management-labor relations act replaced the Wagner Act 2½ years ago, Denham and the NRLB members have been engaged in a behind-scenes tug-of-war. The Taft-Hartley Act divided up the original powers of NRLB. The general counsel — Denham — became the prosecutor of Taft-Hartley Act violations; the board was limited to adjudicating the charges.

Denham asserted yesterday that the board in its decisions has made "some substantial repudiations" of Prosecutor Denham's interpretations and applications of the Taft-Hartley Act. Most of these rulings, Denham said, "serve markedly to restrict the application of the law concerning unfair labor practices by labor organizations."

Indirectly, Denham charged that the NRLB was undermining the Taft-Hartley Act with its decisions. He remarked:

"Much has been said recently by columnists, commentators and others, who seem to like the present law, that repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act by Congress will not be necessary in view of tendencies of recent decisions of the board, which, in their opinion, so undercut the real purpose of the act as to amount to repeal by 'decisional attrition' . . . On this score I hardly care to comment. . ."

The NLRB General Counsel observed that "in present political climate" the NLRB decision "may represent a correct line of thought . . ."

"In any event, only the courts can effectively contradict the board's decision, and, up to the present writing, not many of the decisions have come before the courts for review," Denham asserted. He cited several recent decisions of the NLRB and warned that if the employers do not challenge the rulings in the courts, they become the law of the land."

Among the decisions Denham suggested be taken to the courts were those in which the NLRB okayed picketing of trucks, "hot cargo" contract clauses, and "unfair lists." As general counsel, Denham will have to defend these NLRB decisions if and when they get into the courts.

A study of NLRB cases discloses 22 cases prosecuted by Denham in which the court granted temporary injunctions while the alleged violations were processed by the board. In these 22 cases, Denham was overruled seven times, and sustained in all or part of his charges 13 times. Two of the cases were settled through stipulation of the contending parties.

Campbell's Job

Justice Dept. Post Is Given To McInerney

James Michael McInerney, of New York, was nominated by President Truman yesterday to be an Assistant Attorney General.

McInerney

He would succeed Alexander M. Campbell, who resigned as head of the criminal division.

The President also nominated:

Maj. Gen. William P. T. Hill to be quartermaster general of the Marine Corps for a two-year period starting February 1.

John A. Marzall of Illinois as commissioner of patents. Marzall has been serving under a recess appointment.

The elevation of McInerney, the Justice Department said, is in keeping with the President's and Attorney General McGrath's policy of promotion from within the ranks wherever possible.

McInerney, a member of the New York and District of Columbia Bars, joined the department in 1935. He first worked with the FBI and was assigned to a number of the major kidnapings, including those of John J. O'Connell, jr., of Albany, Charles S. Ross of Chicago, Arthur Fried of New York, and others.

He was also specially assigned to the Harlan County coal operators case in Kentucky and to the "Lepke" Buchalter and "Gurrah" Shapiro cases in New York.

McInerney transferred from the FBI to the criminal division in January, 1939.

During the war he was in immediate charge of all treason, espionage, sedition, selective service and other wartime violations.

McInerney is 44 years of age, married and has two sons, Michael, 15, and Kevin, 7.

Confirmation Sought For U. S. Defense Aides

Senate confirmation for three defense officials was recommended yesterday by the Senate Armed Services Committee. They are:

Hubert E. Howard, 60, of Chicago, to be chairman of the Munitions Board.

John F. Floberg, 34, of Chicago, to be Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Truman Denies Crisis in Coal

fuel in fear that the coal strikes and three-day work week would create a scarcity.

51 Days' Supply on Ground

The governmental coal statistics also disclose that there's an above-ground stockpile of 51 days' supply of coal, on the average, for industrial users.

Other figures, show the retail coal dealers have but five days' supply of coal in their yards. These figures, some officials believe are not in themselves alarming, because the retail dealers have been selling more coal, and because many retail users buy their coal direct by truck from the strip mines. Direct home delivery has been particularly true during recent weeks when small nonunion strip mines have been opened as a result of the UMW strikes and short work week.

More statistics: In 1948, all the Nation's mines produced 600 million tons. Of this, 537 million tons were consumed domestically, 46 million tons were exported, and 17 million tons were left over. In 1949, domestic consumption is believed to have fallen off by 14 per cent; exports by 40 per cent. The "normal three day work week of the UMW produces around nine million tons of coal a week, as against 11,500,000 tons produced weekly under the "normal" five day work week.

Other Figures by Producers

However, the Southern Coal Producers Association yesterday estimated that only 15 days' supply of soft coal was above ground, and that most of this stockpile is held by the steel companies and major utilities, but that smaller consumer have but one or two days' supply. The association estimated the soft coal stockpile will be 23 million tons by the end of the week, or the lowest in the past 25 years. The association presented these statistics yesterday in a few hours before the White House press conference, in again urging the President to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act against the miners.

Joseph E. Moody, association president, declared after the President's press conference that his estimates were based on Bureau of Mines statistics.

Other coal developments yesterday:

Representative Ralph E. Church (R., Ill.) introduced a joint resolution in the House urging the President to apply the Taft-Hartley Act. A smiliar joint resolution has been introduced in the Senate.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) said he had informed the White House that the coal shortage in New England has reached the "emergency stage," on the basis of statistics prepared for him by coal dealers.

Union Pacific Railroad yesterday ordered immediate conversion of 40 coal-burning locomotives to oil in order "to insure operations" of the line.

New Yorkers Fail in Water Saving Test

New York, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—It was "Thirsty Thursday" in New York today, but few took the "no-shave, no-bath" edict seriously.

A check showed the city would fall far short of setting the record in water-saving for which officials hoped. The fault apparently was with John Q. Public.

Astronomer Lauds Sky Photo-Mapping

The new and monumental project of photomapping the entire northern sky may take a century, but it is worth it, Rev. Francis J. Heyden, S.J., director of the Georgetown Astronomy Observatory, declared here yesterday.

He spoke at the afternoon session of the annual meeting, American Society of Photogrammetry, at Hotel Shoreham. The project was recently undertaken at Mount Palomar Observatory, California.

Senate Committee Indorses Sherman

the congressional testimony of officers or to "punishing" them for expressing views contrary to his own.

But he declared flatly that subordinates can expect transfer from the Navy Department if they are "not in sympathy with my policies."

Senators William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) and Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) took issue with Matthews' contention that there is no "Congressional immunity" involved in the transfer of a subordinate to a less desirable post for testifying contrary to official opinion.

But after Admiral Sherman gave his views on the question and assured the committee he had given "no committments or promises to anyone," the Senators voted to recommend his confirmation.

Later, on the floor, Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), a former Marine officer, blocked final Senate action on the nomination.

McCarthy said he did not object to Sherman, but wants to study the committee hearings. Before the Senate votes, he said, he wants to discuss what he called the "viciously dangerous" situation of lowering an "iron curtain" between Congress and the armed services.

But Senators agreed that Sherman's confirmation is assured and predicted there would be no further investigation of the Denfeld removal. After yesterday's committee session, Senator Knowland said he did not intend "to press for an inquiry into the Denfeld situation at this time." Bridges agreed.

Committee Chairman Millard Tydings (D., Md) announced he'd consulted Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee during the lunch recess of the group and said Vinson told him his group did not plan any investigation of the Denfeld removal.

Tydings added that Vinson had said that his committee "had all the facts" and would "deal with the matter" in its forthcoming report on last fall's Navy hearings.

The Senate committee decision to question Matthews came after an angry morning session in which Tydings opposed Knowland's motion to call the Secretary. The motion was defeated, 6 to 6, along party lines, and then apparently an informal agreement was reached to hear Matthews for limited questioning.

Answering contentions that Denfeld's removal from office was illegal, the Secretary declared that his first term expired December 7, and he'd not been reappointed. Though nominated and confirmed for the second term, his commission was never issued, Matthews said. Tydings cited the famous case of Marbury vs. Madison in support.

Knowland wanted to know what had changed the mind of Administration chiefs about Denfeld's fitness. Matthews asked that, "out of deference" he be allowed to answer in executive session, but the matter was not pressed.

Then Knowland cited an article in the current Colliers by Rear Adm. Daniel V. Gallery, contending the "reprisals" against Denfeld and others were a warning to Naval officers to "conform or be liquidated." How, under the circumstances, can Congress get "honest opinions" from Naval officers, the Senator asked.

Matthews replied that officers should give their honest views when quizzed by Congress, but that whenever they disagreed with their superiors' policy they must expect to be moved "out of the chain of command where they are depended upon to carry out such policy." That does not constitute a "reprisal" or "punishment," he insisted.

"Then all are on notice that if they disagree with your views and I ask them a question about them, they are apt to be transferred to a less agreeable post?" demanded Knowland.

Matthews replied that this would be true if Knowland had not asked the question, that it was the disagreement with the superiors' views which controlled. Knowland asked if the Secretary did not distinguish between making a speech or writing an article disagreeing with the official viewpoint and answering congressional questions.

"It doesn't matter in my opinion where he expresses his opinion," said Matthews. "If a subordinate in a military organization disagrees with his superior, the superior is not required to keep him just because he expresses himself before a congressional committee."

it is "tragically evident that we cannot count on an era of peace and international friendship with our neighbor across the Bering Strait, next to nothing has been done to defend our western frontier."

He labeled the Eighty-first Congress' appropriation authorization for Alaska of 96 million dollars as "piddling, less than 2 percent of the amount readily appropriated for the defense of European countries earlier."

He lauded Air Force Secretary Stuart Symington for sacrificing his Christmas vacation to investigate Alaskan defense conditions personally. The Governor added: "It is very unusual for Government officials inspecting Alaska to come up there in the winter."

Gruening also claimed "Alaska will never be adequately defended unless and until we get Statehood."

Among the 700 attending the meeting were Senators Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.), Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), Arthur V. Watkins (R., Utah), and Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho).

Senator Magnuson, alluding to reported plans to relocate West Coast war industries, said, "The military people cannot make decisions affecting domestic and economic life without civilian participation in those decisions."

Representative Harry R. Sheppard (D., Calif.) member of the House Appropriations Committee, reported that Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson had assured him personally yesterday that the armed forces have not been directed to avoid letting contracts on the West Coast or the Northwest.

He quoted Johnson as saying "I never issued any order of that kind since I came into office, directly or indirectly, and I do not contemplate issuing such an order now or in the future."

Sheppard said he received similar assurances from Air Force Secretary Symington, Navy Secretary Matthews and Army Secretary Gray that they never received such an order and never issued such orders.

A. J. Hayes, president of the International Association of Machinists and vice president of the All America Defense Association, sharply criticized the supposed military policy of relocating war industries:

"We feel it is unwise and unsafe for the military forces, or any group within them, to exercise on their own responsibility and without recourse to any public discussion an authority to relocate industry as a defense measure."

Such procedures, he said, "is fraught with serious danger to the non-defense economy . . . and there is by no means unanimous opinion among the armed forces" as to the advisability of relocation.

"We propose instead—Let's talk it over—there might be another way," he said. The problems of proposed relocation would be: "Can we move industrial populations? Can we develop soon enough the equipment we need that goes with the plans? Have we provided for housing the employes?" he said.

Wallace F. Bennett of Salt Lake City, chairman of the board of the National Association of Manufacturers, stressed America's spiritual values as a weapon to ward off totalitarianism.

GOP Protests Force Vaughn Report Change

NYHT News Service

The Senate investigations subcommittee's report on five-percenters is being revised as a result of protests by Republican members that the proposed document sought to "soft-pedal" the investigation of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's military aide.

It was not certain last night whether the revised report, which will reportedly delve more deeply into Vaughan's role in the five-percenter inquiry, will satisfy the Republicans. If not, GOP members said, they would refuse to sign it and issue a minority report.

Senators McCarthy of Wisconsin, and Mundt of Wisconsin, reported that only a few paragraphs were devoted to Vaughan's testimony

They insisted the report go into more detail on such incidents as Vaughn's alleged efforts to aid the Tanforan race track and the Allied Molasses Co. as well as the seven deep freezers sent to him as gifts of the Albert Verley Co., Chicago perfumers.

Mundt and McCarthy emphasized they were not charging a "whitewash" of Vaughn. They insisted they simply wanted the report to include an expanded factual account of testimony and evidence presented at the hearings concerning the general.

Dividend Checks For Vets Pouring Out at Treasury

The Treasury yesterday started rolling out checks for the 16 million veterans sharing in the $2,800,000,000 life insurance dividend. A daily output of 200,000 checks is the goal.

With the checks due to pour into the mails next Monday, Postmaster General Donaldson warned the veterans to "keep mail receptacles locked" while awaiting the payoff.

Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman added a warning to merchants and others cashing the checks to guard against forgeries by requiring strangers to provide positive identification.

"The person who cashes a Government check on a forged indorsement is the loser," he pointed out.

Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray said he hopes mailing will be completed by next June 30. Payments are expected to average $175.

Rights Council Hits at Army Racial Policy

Elmer W. Henderson, director of the American Council on Human Rights, yesterday protested the Army's newly liberalized racial policy as "foot-dragging" and "making mockery" of President Truman's antidiscrimination order. der.

However, the plan is said to have the firm support and approval of many Negro leaders who have been carrying the fight for racial equality in the Army and is expected to be indorsed by the President's Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Services.

The new policy, reported in yesterday's Washington Post, would assign a limited number of highly qualified Negro troops to white units as the first step of a long-range plan to eventual elimination of segregation in the ranks.

Court Upholds Version of Star Spangled Flag Sewing

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 12 (AP).—Maryland's Court of Appeals today approved a plan to create at the Star-Spangled Banner Flag House in Baltimore, a patriotic park, dominated by a flag pole, to commemorate the birth of our National Anthem.

The State's highest court upheld a version of history which relates that Mary Pickersgill of Baltimore made the flag that inspired the Star-Spangled Banner.

Defense attorneys in a condemnation suit cast doubt on the history of the flag house by asserting it was "supposedly" the house where Mary Pickersgill sewed the flag

Chief Judge Ogle Marbury disposed of the question, stating flatly:

"The flag house . . . is the place where Mary Pickersgill made, or started to make, the flag which flew over Fort McHenry during the bombardment by the British

"This was the flag which, when seen at dawn on the morning following the attack, inspired Francis Scott Key to write th Star-Spangled Banner."

Marbury's opinion for the unanimous court held that the city of Baltimore has a right to take by condemnation a rooming house next door to the flag house.

In arguments last month, attorneys for Annie Flaccomio, owner of the rooming house, maintained that if Mary Pickersgill made the inspirational flag, it was so large that she had to finish it in the roomier confines of a brewery.

Deputy Head Of Gallinger Takes New Job

Robert D. Southwick, deputy administrator at Gallinger Hospital since 1945, will resign soon to become director of Concord Hospital, Concord, N. H., it was disclosed yesterday.

Southwick

No successor has been selected, nor has Southwick offically turned in his notice to leave the municipal hospital here.

At present, the Concord Hospital has begun construction of a new 3 million dollars, 250-bed institution to replace its outmoded, 175-bed hospital. Southwick's appointment, effective March 1, will enable him to "get in on the ground floor" in directing the changeover, he said.

The Concord director's salary represents a "substantial increase" over the $7911 annual pay for the Gallinger post, Southwick said.

Southwick began hospital administrative work 22 years ago as an administrative assistant at the University of Michigan Hospital.

He is married; has four children ranging from 3 to 14 years old, and has been living at Gallinger.

Mica Is Made In Lab for First Time

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Laboratory development of an artificial mica, insulating material for electrical and electronic equipment, was announced here yesterday.

The feat, accomplished by scientists at the National Bureau of Standards, may relieve this country's dependence on high-priced mica imports from India and South America.

Synthesis of the transparent crystals also called isinglass, was announced by Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, who termed it "a discovery of immense importance to the United States."

Although the United States is the world's largest consumer of mica, Sawyer said, it produces only a small fraction of its own mica needs. In 1948, this country imported more than 10,000 tons of high grade mica, costing more than 15 million dollars. Domestic production for the year was 135 tons valued at less than $50,000.

Sawler said the artificial mica has essentially the same properties as the natural product of earth's age-old pressures and temperatures and is superior to the natural substance in withstanding high temperatures.

It was developed at the Bureau laboratories by Dr. Herbert Insley, Alvin Van Valkenburg and Robert Pike of the mineral products division, after 2½ years of research. The mica-making process, they said, involves crystallizing three common glass-making ingredients—quartz, magnesite and bauxite—with a fluorosilicate compound.

The four powdered ingredients are placed in a platinum-lined crucible and melted in an electric furnice at a temperature of nearly 2500 degrees Fahrenheit. As the furnace cools, mica crystals grow from a tiny seed at the bottom of the crucible.

Whether synthetic mica will be made on a mass scale during peacetime presumably depends on its profit-making possibilities. The bureau, itself, will not undertake mass production, but will make the process available free to American industry, officials said.

Recreation Workers Hear Bonding Plan

Plans to bond District Recreation Department employes who handle department trust fund money were explained yesterday to a meeting of the 168 persons affected. They will be asked to vote on it later.

If approved, the proposal will probably go into effect in March. The department is prohibited by law from paying for the bonds, which would cost those covered $1 to $6 a year.

The purpose is to protect individuals and the department from loss in the handling of money received from movies, dances, games. This money, which amounted to $77,000 in 1948, goes into a trust fund to buy unbudgeted equipment.

Under the proposals, employes would pay now for a three-year bond. If an employe should leave the department within the three-year period, it is expected a proportionate share of his payment would be refunded.

Total cost for three years would be $1168.50. Asked how this compared with amounts lost or stolen from the trust fund over such a period, officials said no exact records were kept to show the comparison.

KATHERINE SAMAS
Shot to death

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS
FELIX SAMAS
Kills five and then himself

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 12 (U.P.).—A machinist today shot to death his estranged wife, his two children, a newlywed couple, then set fire to his house and killed himself, police reported.

The blood-spattered scene of wholesale murder and suicide in the cottage home of Felix Samas, 27, was discovered by firemen when they answered a routine alarm.

Samas, authorities said, apparently was maddened by his domestic difficulties when he killed his five victims with a .22-caliber rifle. One of them also was stabbed with a knife.

The dead, in addition to Samas, were his wife, Katherine, 24, from whom he had been estranged since before Christmas; their children, Felix, jr., 4, and Phyllis, 18 months, and Richard Norman, 26, and his bride, Shirley, 18, who had been living with Mrs. Samas.

Police Capt. Andrew Pellar said Samas apparently entered the small bungalow on Hammond's southeast side during the night while his wife was away. He had been living elsewhere since their estrangement and she had filed suit for divorce.

Veteran Slays Wife, Baby, Tries Suicide

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Twenty-eight-year-old Darrell Welch today beat his wife to death with a rolling pin, fatally shot their 15-months-old baby girl and then attempted to commit suicide, the Franklin County sheriff's office reported.

Welch, who plunged a knife into his stomach, was taken to University Hospital from his suburban Worthington home, 3 miles north of Columbus, where the double slaying occurred.

His wife, Bess, 26, had been away the entire afternoon with the baby, Margaret Cecelia. The Army veteran met her at the door as she returned home, killed her, then shot the baby.

Man Seized In Rape of D. C. Girl, 17

A 26-year-old department store accountant was arrested here yesterday by Fairfax County (Va.) police on a warrant charging him with rape of a 17-year-old girl employed in the same store.

The defendant is Patrick Hubert Heissler, of 2012 K st. nw. The warrant was issued on complaint of the girl's father.

County Detectives William L. Durrer and Lance Green said the girl told them she went for a ride with Heissler Wednesday night. She said the two had a milk shake and coffee at a restaurant near the 14th street bridge, then drove southward along Mount Vernon boulevard.

The girl told the policemen Heissler parked his car in a secluded spot on Fort Hunt rd., about three miles south of Alexandria, and forced his attentions on her after pulling her over into the rear seat. Later, she told police, he drove her home.

After his arrest, the detectives said. Heissler made a complete denial of the charge. He is under $2000 bond in Fairfax County.

Bit and Half-Bit Coins Sought in Patman Bill

The "bit" would be worth 12½ cents; the "half-bit" would equal 6¼ cents.

Speedy Trial Plea Too Late, Court Rules

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 12 (AP).—Everyone has a constitutional right to a speedy trial, but only if you ask for one, the Maryland Court of Appeals ruled today.

The court rejected the plea of Ronald Harris, once known as Baltimore's "maniac bandit," and now doing time in the Maryland Penitentiary.

Harris asked the court to quash charges pending against him in Prince Georges County for more than five years.

Unanimously, the court refused, stating that Harris failed to demand trial until last year and once his request was received a trial was quickly ordered.

"In a case like the one before us it is the duty of the incarcerated person to demand a speedy trial of an indictment pending against him," Judge C. Gus Grason wrote for the court.

"If he fails to demand such a trial he waives his right to a speedy trial," Grason added. Harris must stand trial, he ruled.

Harris, 44, was indicted April 12, 1944, in Prince Georges. He was charged with robbery, assault, larceny and receiving stolen goods.

Mercy Slaying Trial Of Girl Set for Jan. 24

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 12 (U.P.). Carol Paight, 20, blonde college senior, was indicted on a second-degree murder charge today for slaying her cancer-ridden father.

Miss Paight, who shot her policeman-father at Stamford Hospital last September to spare him an agonizing death, pleaded innocent and elected a trial by jury.

Trial was set for January 24.

Woman Says She Set Hospital Fire

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
MRS. ELNORA EPPERLY
Confesses starting fire

Davenport, Iowa, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—A 3-year-old woman patient conessed today she set off the fire in he mental ward of Mercy Hospital ast Saturday which killed 41 women.

A first-degree murder charge was filed against Mrs. Elnora Epperly of Rock Island, Ill.

She told Dr. John Marker she was "going crazy" from being shut up in her room. She had been admitted December 12 and was due to be released the day of the fire.

"I thought my husband was dead," she told Marker. "He never came to see me. I thought I could escape if the building burned down."

Her husband, John, had tried to see her but had been advised by nurses a visit would "disturb her."

Mrs. Epperly, a petite, pretty brunette, said she set fire to curtains in her hospital room with a cigarette lighter her husband gave her for Christmas. She told the story first to her husband last night. He notified State's Attorney Bernard Moran.

She said she "couldn't sleep" after the tragedy and was driven to confess. Moran said she suffered from a complex that caused her to "take the blame for atomic war."

Justices Confused

Court Hears D. C. Health Warrant Case

The Supreme Court went into overtime yesterday to seek a solution to the dilemma of the District health inspections.

A lower court has ruled that a warrant is necessary if a householder objects to the inspection.

Arguments were extended an unusual hour and a half but appeared to leave the justices in a confused state. At least two—Justices Frankfurter and Jackson—were declaring when arguments ended that there appeared to be no constitutional question at all for the court to settle.

An opinion will be handed down in the spring.

Swap Sharp Words

At one point Justice Frankfurter and Anne X. Alpern, city solicitor of Pittsburgh, swapped sharp words. Miss Alpern, appearing for the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, said comments of the justices appeared to indicate some of them weren't aware of the serious health problems involved.

At this Justice Jackson remarked he didn't know who that would be. Miss Alpern said she was referring to comments by Frankfurter. Then Frankfurter said sharply:

"You may not know it, but earlier in my life I spent a full year as a health enforcement officer in the New York City tenements district. I am not unaware of the problems involved."

Said Warrant Necessary

Miss Alpern argued that if the lower court opinions are confirmed in the Little case "a vast field of public health and safety will be closed." She said it would make impossible current routine health and fire inspections where the inspectors have no knowledge of violations before they enter a home and hence could not obtain a warrant to enter.

Mrs. Geraldine Little refused admission of a District health officer to her home and the appeal courts upheld her, declaring a warrant should have been sought. A complaint stated there was accumulated garbage in her house.

Mrs. E. J. Davis Wins Divorce

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 12 (AP). Mrs. Elsie Johnson Davis of 3300 Lee blvd., Arlington, Va., has been granted a divorce from Albert N. Davis of Westport, a commercial artist, on the ground of intolerable cruelty.

Superior Court Judge Howard W. Alcorn awarded Mrs. Davis the custory of her two sons, Elmer N. Davis, 17, and Jeffrey Davis, 9. Davis was given the right of reasonable visitation.

He also was ordered to pay Mrs. Davis $100 a month as alimony, $150 a month for the support of each child and back alimony and support of $10,000.

They were married October 5, 1932, and separated December 15, 1948. Davis contested his wife's petition.

$50,000 Suit Against Sabath Is Dismissed

A District Court judge ruled yesterday that a statement made as an "extension of remarks" in the Congressional Record is libel-proof.

The ruling was made by Judge Matthew F. McGuire in throwing out of court a $50,000 declaratory judgment suit brought by Robert H. Williams of Los Angeles against Representative Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.).

In the suit, Williams contended he was defamed by Sabath in an "extension of remarks" which appeared in the Congressional Record August 15, 1947. Sabath wrote Williams had been in the "weather and air" intelligence of the Army and was not investigating subversive activity. Williams called the statement libelous.

In granting summary judgment on motion of Sabath's attorney, Milton I. Baldinger, Judge McGuire wrote a three-word opinion: "Privilege absolute — Congressional."

Williams argued that since the statement in issue was never spoken on the floor but appeared in the Record several weeks after Congress adjourned, the immunity against libel inhering to Sabath as a Representative was lost.

Judge McGuire also granted summary judgment in a second count charging $50,000 libel to a second defendant in the suit, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. Williams accused the organization of defaming him in its book, "Anti-Semitism in the United States in 1947," when it said he "expressed unfriendly sentiments" and was not a member of the Military Intelligence Reserve.

On this point, Judge McGuire cited an earlier court decision that organizations have a constitutional privilege against libel actions when making statements without malice and in protection of their own rights and interests.

The B'nai B'rith was represented by Attorney Harry Wender and Henry G. Fischer.

Social Security Liberalization Is Denounced

A bitter attack on proposals to liberalize the Social Security Act was delivered yesterday by Judd C. Benson of Cincinnati, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters.

He spoke at a specially called luncheon of life underwriters in Washington, at the Mayflower Hotel.

Included in his denunciation were "top administrators" of the present act, who, he said, are constantly lobbying to expand the measure and who would do the same no matter what the politics of the administration in power. He also criticized sharply "unwillingness of some Congressmen to devote the necessary time to understand thoroughly the proposed Social Security legislation."

Benson said the entire Social Security system is one which encourages laxity and dependence upon Government in individuals and discourages industry, initiative and thrift. He said the proposed changes would be a wide-open invitation for States to seek out individuals who are eligible for benefits.

Specifically, he said, the NALU opposes plans to increase the wage base for social security tax levies above the present $3000 maximum; lump-sum death benefits; and extra benefits for years of coverage, Benson said.

He warned against the extension of social security legislation as a "nefarious process by which many men are falling into an economic trap," will increase centralization of power in the Government at Washington.

One of two members of the gang arrested told police Haddad "collected 10 percent of my split from me after each robbery"

Quake Shakes Japan

Berkeley, Calif., Jan. 12 (U.P.)—A "moderate" earthquake, believed centered in Japan, was recorded by the University of California seismograph early today.

Jailed for Threats to Parents

A 28-year-old former marine yesterday was sentenced to 120 days in jail for threatening to kill his father and stepmother.

He is Thomas L. Wilson, jr., who lives with his parents at 714 Whittier st. nw.

Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott recommended that Wilson receive medical treatment after learning he twice tried to hang himself in a Sixth Precinct station house cell following his arrest Wednesday night.

Wilson's father testified that last October 18, the son threatened with a Japanese sword to "cut my damn head off." The threat was made during an argument while the son was in a "drunken condition," the father said.

Wilson's stepmother testified that Wednesday night the son told her: "If I had more in me, you wouldn't last two minutes." She said the threats against the father in October occurred a few weeks after her husband had suffered a stroke.

Wilson stated he did not remember threatening his father because he had the "DT's" at the time. He denied threatening his stepmother.

Maryland Rotating Assessments Upheld

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 12 (AP).—Maryland's Court of Appeals today upheld the complicated system of rotating property assessments.

The door was left open for a further test of the system's administration by the State Tax Commission, specifically its method for determining a property's "full cash value." The court said this question isn't before it, yet.

Judge Edward S. Delaplaine wrote the opinion in which the State's highest tribunal reversed Chief Judge John B. Gray of the Seventh Judicial Circuit in southern Maryland.

Refuses to Accept Plan

The commissioners of Calvert County, in which Judge Gray lives, had refused to accept 1950 property assessments drawn up on a formula laid down by the State Tax Commission.

Attorney General Hall Hammond, calling it a "civil tax war," asked for a writ of mandamus requiring the county commissioners to accept the assessments. Judge Gray refused the writ and Hammond appealed to Annapolis.

Today's decision was on that appeal and the high court unanimously commanded the Calvert commissioners to follow the State Tax Commission formula.

While the legal attack on the assessment system originated in Calvert County, the decision effects the whole State. There have been anguished cries against assessments in Baltimore City and the counties. Attorney General Hammond had warned that a decision in favor of Calvert County would wreck the State's whole property tax system.

Overhauled in 1941

In 1941 the Maryland General Assembly overhauled the system, dividing Baltimore and each of the 23 counties into five tax districts. One district was to be reassessed each year. The assessment stood for five years while the other districts were reassessed in turn. Then the first district would be assessed again. The new law in 1941 also put the State tax commission in charge of this procedure.

Miss Truman Due to Gross $60-75,000

New York, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Margaret Truman said today she hadn't met the right man yet but when and if she marries she will try to continue her career as a singer and manage a home, too.

Right now, Miss Truman said, she's completely engrossed with music and she wants to get settled in a career before she even considers marriage. A wedding definitely isn't in the cards for this year, the President's daughter said.

The man of her choice is going to have to go to Mr. Truman and ask for his daughter's hand, Margaret said with a twinkle in her eye.

Miss Truman said she had not "dated" regularly in New York because the big city was too fast for her.

Margaret doesn't consider herself a success yet.

"I'm just starting out," she said. "But I'm determined to continue my career, despite anyone."

She said unfavorable comments by critics do not bother her and the favorable ones outnumber the unfavorable 3 to 1.

Miss Truman indicated her gross income would be between $60,000 and $75,000 next year, but taxes and expenses will take half of it.

"I don't think much about it because I'm not primarily interested in money," she said. "Music is my main interest. I could have as many engagements as I want. But my managers are taking me along solidly and slowly and not selling me as a 'special attraction.'"

RCAF Crash Kills 2

"Strong" Chairmen

The plan to add to the authority of the chairmen of various Federal commissions, as reported by Jerry Kluttz, warrants some searching examination before it is put into broad practice. Under the Administration plan, board chairmen would be appointed specifically by the President instead of succeeding by rotation or being elected by board members as is now sometimes the case. Moreover, chairmen would be made directly responsible for administration of their agencies, including budget and personnel. "Other commission and board members," according to Mr. Kluttz, "would attend hearings, write opinions, etc."

Unquestionably it is desirable administrative practice to make authority commensurate with responsibility. But in many regulatory commissions it is the whole commission or board, rather than merely the chairman, that is charged in the law with administration of the agency. There is a distinct danger that the Administration plan would reduce members other than the chairman—who still share ultimate responsibility—to the status of fifth wheels. Indeed, it would not be impossible for the chairman to abuse his position by cutting the staff or budget of independent commissioners in retaliation for unpopular stands.

The commission form of regulation has inadequacies, but it was adopted for such agencies as the Interstate Commerce Commission, Civil Aeronautics Board, Maritime Commission and the like as the best means of protecting the public interest. Administrative efficiency in loosely organized agencies admittedly is often a problem. Rather than make the chairman a "strong man," however, would it not be preferable to place authority over personnel and budgets in the hands of a general manager responsible to the whole commission? Too much accent on the "strong man" principle could easily void the whole purpose of regulation by bipartisan or nonpartisan bodies.

Judicial Restraint

In refusing to review the decision of the Maryland Court of Appeals in striking down Baltimore's gag rule on crime news, the Supreme Court administered a salutary lecture to the press and the public on what it means by denying a petition for certiorari. Journalists and commentators have frequently assumed that if the Supreme Court refused to review a case submitted to its voluntary jurisdiction, it thereby places its stamp of approval on the decision it refuses to review. That is obviously an unfair conclusion. Through Mr. Justice Frankfurter the court has spelled out in detail the simple negative character of a refusal to grant certiorari.

Of course, this negative act in itself is significant in a case as important as that involving the Baltimore gag rule. A Baltimore court had found a news broadcaster and a radio station guilty of contempt and imposed fines on them for broadcasting a sensational report on the arrest of Eugene H. James and his confession of the murder of two young girls, one in Washington and the other in Baltimore. The Maryland Court of Appeals had reversed these convictions on the authority of three previous decisions of the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court has left that decision standing. But it has done nothing more than that. The unusual opinion by Justice Frankfurter pointed out that issues of the greatest importance are involved in this case—on one side freedom of the press and on the other side the fair administration of criminal justice. But for some reason the court chose not to adjudicate those issues. "It is not to be supposed," Justice Frankfurter said, "that by implication it means to adjudicate them by refusing to adjudicate."

It would be physically impossible for the court to review all the 1100-odd cases that are submitted to it each year. Its great function is not to mete out justice in any particular case but to clarify the law. The justices examined petitions for certiorari to see which cases ought to be reviewed in the interests of the law. If four justices think a case should be reviewed, the court always reviews it. But there are many technical reasons why a review may be denied, and Justice Frankfurter now reminds us that the court may not wish to review a case because the record is cloudy. Or it "may be desirable to have different aspects of an issue further illumined by the lower courts. Wise adjudication has its own time for ripening."

The court may seem to have evaded an important issue, but we have no doubt that its self-restraint is wise. The action of the Maryland court has precluded any abuse under the Baltimore gag rule for the present. If the issue arises again, the court will have the advantage of looking at it from a different angle. There is sagacity, as many able judges have reminded us, in self-restraint in dealing with vital constitutional issues as well as in bold action when it is necessary to protect civil rights.

Acheson's Riposte

Secretary Acheson in as smooth a performance as has ever been witnessed at the National Press Club outlined yesterday a policy in Asia opposed to the adventurism advocated by a wing of the Republican Party. The policy rests upon a diagnosis which to us is unassailable. Asiatics are intent upon throwing off the yoke of imperialism and upon embarking on their own methods of improving their living conditions. The United States, with its long tradition of anticolonialism, will not interfere with that movement. On the contrary, it will supply any "missing component" — presumably through Point Four—to those states in Asia which will buttress their independence and their economy. Exactly where the Chinese overturn fits into this diagnosis is not so clear. Mr. Acheson implied that this was a Chinese rather than a Russian phenomenon. He went on to speak, however, of the demonstrated imperialism of Moscow in what is called extramural China—that is, say, Manchuria, Mongolia, Inner as well as Outer, and Sinkiang.

Mr. Acheson's wit pierced the certitudes which Senator Taft has imparted into his discussion on Far Eastern strategy. He was devastating in his refutation of the thesis that Senator Taft shares with others that the conduct of our foreign policy should be standardized. A foreign policy must safeguard and pursue the American interest, but the American interest is not necessarily the same everywhere. Nobody by any stretch of the imagination could say, for example, that Greece is China. That being so, the Secretary said, the inconsistency of which he was accused not only corresponded with common sense but would continue to govern his advice to the President.

What does all this spell in terms of policy? A policy of nonintervention in China, "so as not to deflect from the Russians to ourselves the righteous anger and wrath of the Chinese people" which must develop when they see the unfoldment of Russian aggression on their borderlands. This design appeared to the Secretary to be "the most important single fact" in present happenings. Though patience will be difficult for the American people to maintain, we are persuaded the Secretary is right, for the Russians always have overplayed their hands in their relations with China, and an irredentism is bound to arise there.

What was missing in Secretary Acheson's statement in this respect was some indication of the importance of American propaganda and psychological warfare. It is not enough to await a Chinese awakening—to let the fact of Russian aggression sink in. It is not enough so to conduct ourselves as to prevent any deflection of Chinese resentment to America. Chinese irredentism must be cultivated by all the means at our disposal. Maybe this is being done, but, judging from our own information, propaganda and psychological warfare in China is weak and ineffective.

In other respects the Secretary, in making an antithesis with adventurism, seems to be advocating too much aloofness. He spoke, for instance, of the "inflammatory" nature of cold war between India and Pakistan. There was a gentle reminder to them to "accommodate their wills," but Mr. Acheson hastened to add that the "responsibility is theirs." However, the American interest in peace—indeed, as the main guardian of world peace—is involved, and an opportunity was lost, it seems to us, in not offering American good offices in the adjustment of the disputes (of which Kashmir is only one) job in Asia will require a selective and between these two countries. Moreover, the American job in Asia calls for judicious and selective investment, perhaps out of Marshall Plan funds as well as Point Four appropriations, and this need seemed somewhat understressed in the Secretary's otherwise admirable speech.

ECA And U. S. Trade

Some thought is being given to the effects of the anticipated cut of more than a billion dollars in ECA expenditures. Since about two thirds of exports to Europe are financed by ECA funds, the first effect will be a reduction in those exports. Of course, devaluation of the currencies of ECA countries is counted upon to increase their sales in dollar markets, and to that extent will provide additional funds for purchases of American goods. But there is no evidence that these private purchases will be offsetting. The repercussions here as well as abroad may as well be faced before the debate on ECA comes around. More than half a billion dollars of ECA funds were used last year to buy machinery and equipment. An equally large sum was spent for American cotton, and ECA-financed purchases of tobacco, food and feed grains, and dairy products also provided outlets for surplus farm products. This trade is bound to be curtailed with the curtailment of ECA appropriations. And the loss will doubtless depress the price of farm products and other export goods.

The great danger is that political pressure will be exerted to induce participating countries to buy goods in surplus supply in the United States instead of limiting purchases to indispensable products. That would not only set back their recovery; it would retard our own efforts to solve the problem of surpluses by finding new market outlets for American products and by adjusting America's internal economy to the changed requirements of the postwar world. Most Americans subscribe to the thesis that the United States cannot continue indefinitely to export billions of dollars more goods than it imports. Our so-called favorable trade balance, made possible by Government grants and loans, is based on an unsound foundation, and its cost is reflected in heavy taxes and swollen indebtedness. The aim of the recovery program is to increase the productive capacity of aided nations and enable them to pay for what they buy from us by shipping us goods—or at least enable them to achieve an approach to solvency that will restore their credit and attract private investment capital so that the United States Government will not have to finance deficits in their dollar trade balances.

Recognizing Franco

Representative Kee in the House on Monday clarified a good many matters relating to the question of full recognition of Franco's Spain. The first and most important is the fact that the United States already recognizes the Franco government and has done so continuously since shortly after the final collapse of the Loyalist government in the early part of 1939. The question, therefore, is whether we should resume now an exchange of embassies with the Spanish government. For some years the United States has been represented at Madrid only by a charge d'affaires, who is accredited to the Foreign Minister rather than to the generalissimo himself. Mr. Kee suggested that one obstacle is the difficulty of finding a man suitably qualified for so delicate and important a mission. An Ambassador to Spain, as Mr. Kee observed, > must be able to deal with Spanish problems . . . as part of our western European policy . . . A solution of issues with Spain is devoutly to be desired—but not at the price of impairing our objectives among Spain's neighbors. Our next envoy must be broad in his comprehension of those objectives and resolute in his devotion to them. The American public must have complete faith in his disposition to represent them 100 per cent of the way . . . With an envoy of such caliber in Madrid, we should find the restoration of an Ambassador there much to our advantage.

Another obstacle to the restoration of an embassy to Spain is the resolution adopted four years ago by the General Assembly of the United Nations, specifically debarring Spain from membership in that body "until a new and acceptable government is formed there," and recommending that the member nations "immediately recall from Madrid their Ambassadors and Ministers Plenipotentiary." Thus unless the United States is prepared for unilateral action, contrary to the expressed will of the United Nations, the resolution must first be rescinded. We should not, Mr. Kee believes, "act in such a way as to weaken in the slightest degree our unity with the nations with which we have entered into great commitments."

It is plain, however, that the resolution was badly advised. The mistake that led to its adoption lay in assuming the perpetuation of the political conditions existing at the time. It is probably true, as Representative Kee says, that the fundamental character of the Spanish government has not changed since the resolution, but the character of international politics has altered radically.

The whole difficulty, it seems to us, arises from a confusion about what is implied in recognition. In earlier times this difficulty did not exist, for recognition implied nothing more than the power of the government to govern. Thus the policy was to recognize all de facto governments as soon as they had demonstrated themselves to be such. Indeed, Mr. Kee admitted that whenever the United States has departed from this tradition, whenever it has awarded its recognition as a moral indorsement of a government or its leaders, "we have usually involved ourselves in more problems than we solved."

This being so, the question of full recognition to Spain should not, in our opinion, be weighed according to the theoretic merits or defects of its form of government, or according to the personal qualities of the ruler, but solely according to its advantages or disadvantages in the present state of international affairs. Now, whether we like Franco or not, the fact remains that Spain is part of western Europe. Thus the sending of an embassy to Madrid must be undertaken sooner or later; and, in our opinion, it would be better sooner than later—for the longer it is delayed the more the full recognition of Spain, when it comes, will seem like a moral indorsement of its leader.

"Life . . . a stalemate of dust and desire."
William Faulkner

Dust and desire, both,
Are lodestones of our life:
True North and burning North,
The spirit versus strife,

Two compass points, no more,
To which our years are tied . . .
A flame that sears the flesh,
The ashes felt inside.

Two short magnetic arcs
That cut peripheries
Of happiness and pain
And mark their boundaries.

Dust and desire, both,
Attract us, so it seems:
The one draws us to death,
The other to our dreams.

Orders By Trolley

Americans have taken a lot from radio that was dull, stupid and annoying but that little switch that shuts it all off has always been within easy reach.

Now, however, radio has overreached itself. We are having our radio fare crammed down our throats on streetcars and buses without any possibility of escape. Softly but insistently the oily, unctuous voice of the announcer insinuates itself into the minds of transit riders. Consciously we try to resist this invasion of privacy but subconsciously the pressure is built up which will result in our demanding "Superzest, the healthful cigarette," and "Zombola, the nickel candy bar with the lift that never lets you down."

How easy and simple is the next step: interpretation of the "news." The greasy voice will tell us what we should know and what to think about it. We'll pick up the goose-step much faster.

Or will we? There's still a chance that there are enough real Americans left in Washington so that one of these days a band of men dressed as Indians will pile aboard the streetcars and buses, tear out the radio equipment and hurl in into the street. Or perhaps, this being 1950 instead of 1773, we may be treated to the irony of hearing the announcer advertising "Blockems, the new ear-stoppers that relieve you from listening to all annoying sounds."

Blockade Running

The shelling of the Isbrandtsen freighter Flying Arrow by Chinese Nationalist warships came as no surprise in view of the announced determination of the Isbrandtsen Lines that the freighter would run the blockade.

For the fact that no American lives were lost, we can attribute no thanks to Mr. H. J. Isbrandtsen, president of Isbrandtsen Lines, who, in the sheltered security of his New York office, could with great braggadocio dare the Nationalists to precipitate an international incident.

The claim of Mr. Isbrandtsen that his vessels have a right under international law to do business with the Chinese Communists is apparently justified by the inconsistent policy of the State Department which does not recognize a state of civil strife in China and therefore refuses to recognize the Nationalist blockade. It should also be borne in mind that the State Department has warned American ships that they run the blockade at their own risk.

Mr. Isbrandtsen's statement of January 9, that "according to standing naval regulations the United States Navy should protect American vessels on the high seas," does not justify the company claim that the Flying Arrow was not in blockaded waters at the time of the shelling but in international waters where it should have been protected by American warships. United States Navy instructions governing maritime and aerial warfare state that "the liability of a blockade runner to capture and condemnation begins and terminates with her voyage. If there is good evidence that she sailed with the intent to evade the blockade, she is liable to capture from the moment she appears upon the high seas."

FBI Wire Tapping

I can't understand all this childish stuff about prohibiting the use against criminals of evidence obtained through wire tapping. The police and FBI are welcome to tap my telephone any time they like—and I dare say that most law-abiding citizens feel likewise.

Just what rules do the criminals observe to "play fair" with the police and the public? A crime almost invariably causes suffering on the part of some innocent person, and through our namby-pamby coddling of criminals there is a great deal too much of it in this country. Must we believe that evidence obtained through wire tapping should not be used to prevent the dynamiting of the Capitol or the wrecking of a train?

I say that any means short of torture—and I am not sure that that would not be justifiable in some instances—should be used to prevent crime or convict criminals. R. L. M.

"Margarine Vs. Butter"

I would like to touch on two points in the January 10 letter of Mr. Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Milk Producers Association.

1. "I should like to protest emphatically the editorial in your issue of January 5, which shows such a cynical disregard for the interest of farmers and the facts." (Italics mine.) Would Mr. Holman like to have the reader infer that the products which go into the manufacture of oleomargarine are not produced by farmers?

2. Quoting Mr. John Brandt, president of the above-mentioned association: "In other words, he proposed equal treatment for oleo and butter." Does Mr. Holman or Mr. Brandt mean to say that the butter manufacturers would stop using artificial coloring matter in butter to make it look like butter?

Formula For Federal Aid to Education

Foremost among the unfinished business of the Eighty-first Congress is the enactment of a bill providing Federal aid to public education. Few can doubt the need for Federal assistance to the States to meet the present educational crisis. In the wealthiest Nation in the world, vast numbers of children receive no elementary education at all or at best a seriously substandard education.

In World War II, 12 percent of the men found unfit for service were rejected solely for educational deficiencies. The Census Bureau estimates that for the year 1947 about four million children between 5 and 17 attended no school at all. More than 10 percent of teachers in public schools are serving under emergency or substandard certificates.

We believe that a bill for Federal aid to education which can unite the forward-looking forces and thus insure its enactment must possess the following minimum essentials:

1. Basically it must be an equalization measure. The educational situation is far more critical in some sections of the country than in others, since the country's wealth is unequally distributed among the States. Income per capita in the United States ranges from $659 in Missisipi to $1781 in New York (1947 averages), and this geographic maldistribution of wealth and income manifests itself in a tragic maldistribution of educational opportunity.

During the school year of 1944-45, New Jersey expended $198.33 for each child in its public schools, while Mississippi spent no more than $44.80. The amount spent for each child in New York was $194.47, while in Arkansas it was only $60.25. The average teacher's salary in New York was $2783, while in Arkansas it was only $918. That this discrepancy is not caused by a greater concern for education in New York than in Arkansas is proved by the fact that Arkansas spent a greater percentage of its income for its schools than did New York. Inequality of educational opportunity is the result of economic inequality, not of inequality of will.

Hence, while a nominal allocation may be made to every State, the bulk of the appropriation must be distributed among the States in accordance with need.

2. The bill must contain adequate safeguards against discriminatory treatment of Negro and other minority groups. According to the United States Office of Education, States having segregated school systems expend an average of almost twice as much for the education of a white child as for a Negro child. The existence of racially segregated schools is itself a blot upon the American public school system which, must in time be eliminated. Any measure which forward-looking forces can support must provide effective means to prevent discriminatory application of Federal funds. Such discrimination is inequitable and unconstitutional.

3. It should be an educational measure dealing only with educational services. Federal aid for health and other necessary welfare services must be met in legislation apart from a law to equalize educational opportunities.

4. The educational benefits of a Federal aid bill must be limited to tax-supported and publicly controlled educational institutions, whether or not State constitutions or laws permit use of State funds for sectarian educational institutions.

5. The bill must contain safeguards to prevent violation of these principles. Provisions must be made for judicial review of its administration so as to insure against unlawful diversion of Federal funds for sectarian purposes.

A bill, containing the essential elements outlined in this letter could, we are convinced, unite the forward-looking forces of our country in a determined and successful campaign to equalize educational opportunities while maintaining the integrity of our nonsectarian public school system.

Easy Race For Taft

By Marquis Childs

Democratic Come-On

TAFT vs. Truman!

The smart insiders in the Democratic Party are more and more convinced that that is the line-up for 1952. What has just happened in Columbus, Ohio—or, rather, didn't happen—confirms that view.

Chairman William M. Boyle, jr., of the Democratic National Committee went out to Ohio to meet with Democrats, laborites and farmer representatives. According to advance rumors, his mission was to persuade all elements to agree on a candidate who could defeat Senator Robert A. Taft in the election this fall.

The leaders of organized labor, who have made Taft their No. 1 target, were hopeful that the agreed-upon candidate would be Murray Lincoln, executive secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation since 1920 and the leading promoter of cooperative enterprise in this country. For many months pressure has been applied to Lincoln, who was at one time a registered Republican and who has never run for public office, by labor and farm groups to persuade him to run.

But Lincoln has been reluctant. He indicated from time to time that he would run only if all elements in the Democratic Party, both State and national, would agree on his candidacy. In other words, he declined to wage a fight in the primary.

At the Columbus session a question arose that has been the subject of speculation here in Washington. The report has persisted that Boyle and the men around the President decided they would rather not see Taft defeated so that he would in all likelihood be the Republican nominee for President in '52. Truman, renominated, would then, as they see it, have an easy victory.

THIS WAS put squarely up to Boyle at a press conference. Naturally he denied it. And there were inspired interpretations of the Columbus meeting to the effect that this was a resolute determination to keep hands off local contests.

The last is slightly laughable, since in other local contests the National Committee has certainly not hesitated to take a decisive role. The complicated situation in New York State was firmly resolved last year with insistence on Herbert Lehman as the candidate for the Senate. Lehman defeated John Foster Dulles, who had been appointed by Governor Dewey.

In the aftermath of the Ohio meeting Lincoln, himself, and many of his most ardent proponents, have the distinct impression that President Truman's political advisers would be well satisfied to see Taft reelected to the Senate and thereby so strengthened in his push for the Presidency that only a Republican rebellion on a scale rarely seen could sidetrack him. No matter what Democratic Fair-Deal desires and wishes may be, Senator Taft's reelection seems as of this writing assured. The Democratic nomination will in all probability go more or less by default to a loyal, regular Democrat, such as State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, who will scarcely be a match for Taft.

IT MAY BE that Lincoln is too forthright and too radical for the Democratic committee. Speaking before the Maryland Farm Bureau convention this week, he boldly tackled the problem of falling farm prices at the point of greatest political sensitivity. This is with respect to the share of the family's food dollar that goes to the farmer and the share that goes to the large-scale processor. Lincoln called for an investigation by the Federal Trade Commission into what he said were "drastically wrong" differences in this division.

He went on to advocate that large procesors of milk, such as Borden's and the National Dairy Co., be acquired by cooperatives with the aid of Government loans and then operated on the co-op principle. Lincoln suggested parallels in cooperative endeavor to indicate that this could mean important price reductions.

"We are now in a period," he said, "when science and mechanization in agriculture and science and mass production in industry have combined to make abundance for all possible. This rather than the isms, is the real revolutionary force at work in the world today."

That is strong stuff. While it might please the laborites, it would be likely to send nervous tremors through Ohio's regular Democrats. The challenger to take on Taft will be expected to talk in far more orthodox political terms.

Mme. Chiang's Farewell

As an afterthought listening to Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's farewell speech, I was wondering how much her next flying trip, when "death calls" on the island of Formosa, to the United States will cost. As the American people like their speech-makers to keep their word, they should demand that the United States refuse her accommodation there for treatment of what seems to be an incurable sickness. Sticking it out beside her husband might teach her to be in the "suffering humanity" she often refers to in her pretty little speeches.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The First Test

BY COURTESY of Mao Tse-tung and the French government, the energy and seriousness of the New American policy in Asia will almost immediately be subjected to its first test. The test will come in Indo-China, which is, with Burma, one of the two keys to the rich, populous and strategically vital southeast Asiatic peninsula.

In brief, the French government has for some time been urging our Government to give aid and comfort to the non-Communist elements in their former colony, which is still part of the French union. And the time for effective action is very short, because Indo-China's Communist element will soon be receiving aid and comfort from the Chinese Communists across the border.

The detailed position can be simply described. Full Chinese Communist occupation of the border provinces of Yunan, Kwangsi and Kwangtung should occur within a month to six weeks at most. No one expects Mao Tse-tung to send his armies into Indo-China. But the mere presence of Mao's armies in the border provinces will afford a supreme opportunity to the Indo-Chinese Communist leader, Ho Chi Minh.

Hitherto, when Ho Chi Minh wanted supplies or arms for his powerful guerilla movement, he has had to buy them through underground agents in China proper or Hongkong or the Philippines. Similarly, his only refuges have been Indo-China's jungles and mountains.

Now, however, when Ho Chi Minh's guerillas want material help or temporary refuge, they will only have to cross the border to their Chinese comrades. In short, they will be aided as the Greek Communist guerillas were so importantly aided, by possessing foreign bases and supply centers.

THE FRENCH government has therefore asked the State Department to counterbalance Ho Chi Minh's new advantage, by helping to build up the strength and prestige of Ho Chi Minh's rival for power, the Emperor Bao Dai.

This descendant of the old rulers of Annam is a symbol of the belated French realization of the tremendous force of Asiatic nationalism. Some time ago, after innumerable follies in Indo-China, the French decided that they could not defeat Ho Chi Minh while he monpolized the appeal to native patriotism. Paris therefore recognized Indo-China's independence within the French Union, and established a new Indo-Chinese government under Bao Dai. Bao Dai's primary function was, and is, to draw away the native non-Communist patriots who constitute the rank and file of Ho Chi Minh's movement.

The experiment began unfortunately, and the State Department was initially skeptical of its success. More recently, however, the prospects have improved. Bao Dai has shown courage and the ability to attract followers. A native army of 90,000 is being recruited, trained and armed by his government with French help. French High Commissioner Pignon has handled the political problem astutely, and the excellent French army in Indo-China, under General Charpentier, has made good progress against Ho Chi Minh's guerillas.

In these circumstances, the French government is asking this country to extend full recognition to Bao Dai, open diplomatic relations with him, and offer him aid.

IN THIS PLEA, the French are understood to have been joined by the British. The chief of the Imperial General Staff, Field Marshal Sir William Slim, and the British High Commissioner in southeast Asia, Malcolm McDonald, recently investigated the Indo-Chinese situation in person and returned a favorable report. It is now British policy, as well as French, to rely on Bao Dai to halt the Communist advance in Indo-China.

The time for American action will come almost at once, when the French Assembly formally ratifies the independence of the Bao Dai regime. By being bold and firm, we can accomplish two great results. We can, in effect, assure the Indo-Chinese people that Bao Dai is truly independent, and no mere French puppet. And we can simultaneously greatly increase Bao Dai's prestige. According to informed observers, if these results can be accomplished soon enough to forestall Ho Chi Minh's full gain from the Communist victory in China, the effect will be very great indeed.

Within the State Department, it must be added, there is still a tendency to temporize. Those who dislike a full commitment to Bao Dai have urged extending de facto recognition instead of full recognition, deferring establishing a legation in Indo-China, and otherwise using half-measures. Fortunately, however, this temporizing tendency seems, for the moment, to be outweighed by the realization of the gravity of the Far Eastern crisis. If we now act decisively on this Indo-Chinese problem, as seems most probable, the constructive American policy in Asia will be well inaugurated.

Holober Jury Locked Up

"should be taken into account. Any mitigating circumstances are up to you gentlemen to decide."

Then, Judge Brown ordered the jury locked up.

The former Washington jewelry clerk did not testify in his own defense. It was charged that he deliberately shot and killed his wife last February off Route 673, between Vale and Sunset Hill in Fairfax County.

The trial reconvenes at 9 a. m. today.

In his instruction to the jury yesterday, Judge Brown told the talesmen to bear in mind that Holober was charged only with killing his wife.

"Disabuse from your minds," he said, any sentiment that may have come in "because of the infant's death."

The all-male jury was attempting to spin out a verdict from conflicting skeins of medical and psychiatric testimony. On the one hand, Holober was pictured by the defense as hopelessly insane and still possessed with an impulse to kill; on the other, the prosecution argued he was sane enough to know what he was doing and realized the full import of his acts.

The trial began Monday. The defense did not contest evidence that Holober killed his wife. The prosecution contended the crime was a willful, cold-blooded act planned in advance with full cognizance of its implications.

Judge Brown's instructions to the jury made clear, as did later final arguments by counsel on both sides, that the issue is: "Was Holober sane or insane when he did the killings?"

If the jury finds that Holober was partially insane, the judge said, it is not sufficient to exempt him under the law. He insisted that the "defendant must have distinctly understood what he was doing."

If there is a reasonable doubt as to his sanity at the time of the crime, Judge Brown said, "you ought not to find him guilty of first degree murder."

The judge said four verdicts were possible: guilty, with death in the electric chair; guilty, with life imprisonment; guilty, with imprisonment not less than 20 years; or innocent by reason of insanity. In event of the latter verdict, the judge is required by law to commit the defendant to a mental institution, but this was not told to the jurors.

of seven men and five women that she and Acalotti were in Cohen's office "six nights a week." Gambling debts were settled there "once a week, usually Mondays," she said.

The Government subpenaed Cohen as a witness and late yesterday afternoon he was summoned to the courtroom and identified by Miss Franklin.

Both Acalotti and Billeci were Times-Herald circulation men when they were arrested last March in a series of eight raids that climaxed United States Attorney George Morris Fay's 18-month investigation of what he described as Washington's 100-million-dollar-a-year gambling racket.

Subpenas Quashed

Before the trial resumed yesterday morning, Judge Alexander Holtzoff quashed subpenas served by the Government on 11 indicted gamblers called as witnesses.

The 11 were among 13 men who were tried with Lewis in November on charges of operating a 14-million-dollar-a-year gambling businees from an air-conditioned sound-proof room in a bungalow at 4310 46th ave., Bladensblurg, Md. That trial ended in a hung jury and is scheduled for retrial February 2.

In moving to quash the subpenas, Myron G. Ehrlich, attorney for Billeci, charged the government with trying to "deliberately prejudice" the defendants.

Prosecutor William Hitz claimed that since the men were arrested with Lewis in the Bladensburg bungalow the jury would wonder why they were not called as material witnesses.

Judge Holtzoff agreed to quash the subpenas but said he would inform the jury that the witnesses had been called and had been excused on their own motion.

The judge refused to quash subpoenas against two of the men, Bernard J. Del-Negro, 2428 Tunlaw rd., nw., and John R. Mitchell, 3110 10th st., nw., who Hitz said will be identified by other government witnesses.

The defense also lost a motion for a mistrial on the grounds that the defendants had been prejudiced by an article which appeared in The Washington Post yesterday.

Bernard Mergolius, an attorney for Lewis, said that his client had been "irreparably prejudiced" by the story, in which Lewis was linked to the gambling losses of a former Government employe testifying in his own defense in a separate case in District Court.

Judge Holtzoff denied the motion.

Miss Franklin was the only Government witness to take the stand yesterday, and Hitz finished his direct examination at 3:30 p. m.

Attractively dressed in a gray suit and black blouse with a pearl necklace, Miss Franklin quietly repeated much of the story she had told in the Acalotti threat trial.

"Did you become friendly with Acalotti," Hitz asked.

"Yes."

"Did there come a time when you commenced to live with him?"

"Yes."

"As man and wife?"

"Yes"

"Did you help him in his occupation?"

"Yes. He was engaged in taking horse and numbers bets over his telephone at his apartment. Two telephones."

She testified yesterday that Acalotti took "between $400 and $500 worth of numbers bets" weekly.

Of this amount she said Acalotti laid off between $150 to $200 a week with Billeci. "He never kept more than $1 on any number," she said.

At this point Judge Holtzoff interrupted and asked the witness, "What do you mean by 'lay'?"

"That's when someone else shares the risk when you have too much money bet on one number," she replied.

She said Billeci would call regularly at 3 p. m. to "pick up the lay-off money" from Acalotti.

"Till (her name for Acalotti) told me one day that I could get Frankie before 3 o'clock at either Union 6781 or Union 7284 and I wrote those numbers down. He said that Frankie had an account number of '31' at those numbers," Miss Franklin testified.

She said Acalotti never told her where those numbers were located.

In the earlier trial of Lewis, telephone company employees testified that both were listed to 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg. Wednesday, William H. Collins, Lewis' lawyer, told Judge Holtzoff that Lewis "controlled" both telephone numbers.

Miss Franklin testified she called the numbers three times a day. "I would say this is T, Till's code number, calling for 31, Frankie's number," she said.

EMMITT WARRING

Trio Hunted In Holdup

at gunpoint to open a wall safe, then was trussed up.

The thugs escaped.

All this, observers said, must have been a jarring shock to Emmit Warring, who master-minded the old Foggy Bottom Gang. This was composed of Emmitt (The Brain) and his two brothers, Charles "Raggs" (The Trigger), and Leo Paul (The Hard Worker).

Emmitt Warring has been out of the limelight since 1942 when he got out of Lorton Reformatory after serving sentences for jury-tampering and income tax fraud connected with his gambling take, allegedly once about two million a year.

Indicted in 1938

He was indicted with his brothers and an accountant on the tax charge in 1938.

The first trial ended with a hung jury. The second was called off when Judge Bolitha J. Laws was informed attempts had been made to influence the jury. Emmitt was tried, pleaded guilty and sentenced to 26 months for trying to approach jurors at two trials.

His third trial on the income tax case was halted when he pleaded guilty. For this he received three to nine months.

In 1939 he announced through his attorney, F. Joseph Donohue, that he and his brothers were abdicating from the numbers business.

"Warring thought in the beginning," Donohue announced, "that it was a harmless business, giving food money to 400-500 (the number of his numbers employes) . . .

"Had he known it would lead to jail he would never have engaged in the business; he now realizes what serious consequences can follow from what he had thought to be a harmless game."

Called "Fine Neighbor"

Neighbors described Emmitt as a "fine neighbor" who invited youngsters in the block to view his television set. They said he is single, has several huge great Danes and has lived in his 2½-story, white trimmed red brick home, appointed with swank modern furniture for many years.

A reporter who rang the doorbell insistently was greeted only by the barking of dogs.

At the home of the brother-in-law, 3935 Massachusetts ave. nw., a maid opened the door to a reporter, then slammed it shut.

Court Clears Man in Tavern Shooting Case

George P. Harding was cleared in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday of charges he shot and wounded Bernard Del Negro, indicted gambler, in a mystery shrouded affray in a Bladensburg tavern last August.

Harding, 38, arrested after a delayed police investigation of the shooting, also was acquitted yesterday of assaulting Samuel Ochs, Georgetown haberdasher, with whom he reportedly was involved in a fight at the same tavern shortly before Del Negro was shot.

Ochs also had been charged with assault as a result of the fight with Harding, but Prince Georges County authorities declined to press the charges when he refused to waive extradition from the District last October.

Detective Earl Huber testified police found no evidence to link Harding with the assault on Del Negro. He said the assault weapon never was found.

Del Negro, who was wounded in both legs, testified he was unable to identify his assailant because he was shot while standing inside the tavern by bullets fired from the outside.

Judge Alan Bowie ruled there was insufficient evidence to convict Harding in either case.

Harding lives at 437 Massachusetts ave. nw. Del Negro of 2428 Tunlaw rd. nw. is awaiting trial on a gambling indictment returned by a special grand jury following a series of raids here and in Prince Georges County last May.

House Gets 'Slots' Bill

Angeles for Federal legislation to smash the interstate rackets.

Preston said his bill would "strike one of the hardest blows at organized crime ever experienced by the lawless element of the United States. The slot machine racket is perhaps the most highly organized criminal enterprise in America and is master minded by a widespread syndicate reaching into every section of America.

"It has been conservatively estimated that it takes annually three billions of dollars from people who can ill afford to lose. Public sentiment has crystallized against slot machines, as is evidenced by the appeals from mayors and law-enforcement officers for Federal legislation to cope with the situation."

Such appeals will be brought to Washington next month when representatives of four State and municipal groups come here to attend the annual conference of the United States attorneys at the invitation of Attorney General J. Howard McGrath. Preston said he will ask McGrath to put his proposal before the conference. He said he has had "informal encouragement" for the measure from Justice Department officials.

The Preston bill declares:

Conference to Consider Anti-Racketeering Law

President Truman said at his press conference yesterday he believes Attorney General McGrath has called next month's crime conference to reach some conclusion on whether there is a need for a Federal anti-racketeering law. He made the comment in response to a request for comment on the law enforcement conference, due to meet here February 16.

"That whoever shall knowingly transport and cause to be transported in interstate and foreign commerce any machine, apparatus, mechanical device or any parts thereof, designed or adapted for the playing of any game of chance for money or other thing of value, or whoever shall receive, possess or dispose of any article which has been transported in violation of this act, knowing the same to have been transported, shall be guilty of a felony . . ." and subject, on conviction, to fine, imprisonment or both.

Terms would include not only the ordinary "one armed bandit" type of slot machine but also various pinball, claw and other similar devices in common use, Preston said. He added he included the phrase "or any parts thereof" so machines couldn't be shipped across State lines knocked down for later assembly.

Congress Unit Favors Broad Budget Change

stimulating factor to the economy, tending to drive it upward.

This policy of "built-in stability" is close to that recommended by the Committee for Economic Development, a group of progressive businessmen, and by a group of 15 prominent American economists who presented an argument for it to the subcommittee.

Douglas, emphasizing he was speaking individually and not for his subcommittee, said he would apply this policy to mean that the budget should be balanced in the fiscal year 1951, for it was a time of prosperity. Senator Flanders (R., Vt.), the other senatorial member of the subcommittee, agreed.

"If we don't balance the budget in times like these," he said, "then we're never going to do it."

But, Flanders added, in a depression, the worst thing one could do would be to raise taxes, in an attempt to balance the budget.

Deficits in Depressions

The acceptance of an unbalanced budget and deficit spending during a depression was justified in the report as not only economically sound, but politically inescapable. The Nation would not stand for marked increases of tax rates and sharp curtailment of Federal expenditures, the subcommittee said.

The report did not suggest any congressional action to mark a formal acceptance of this policy. In other fields, however, it proposed concrete legislative action.

The most controversial was a proposal that Congress declare it to be its will that the primary responsibility and power for regulating credit rest with the Federal Reserve System.

It also urged that Congress instruct the Federal Reserve and the Treasury that in determining policy for debt-management, money and credit, considerations of the general economic effect on the country be controlling.

The issue referred to here is what has been called an "inherent conflict" between the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board. It has become, to a certain extent, personalized in Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder and former Federal Reserve Chairman Eccles.

Eccles and many other Reserve officials have charged that the Treasury's insistence on keeping interest rates low, in order to reduce the expense of carrying the Federal debt, has deprived the Federal Reserve of its best weapon to restrict credit in times of inflation.

Low interest rates on Government bonds make for low interest rates elsewhere and thus for "easy" money and credit. Eccles has argued that the Federal Reserve, obliged to establish a market for bonds no matter what rate the Treasury sets, has been made powerless to produce credit restriction when needed.

Control by Federal Reserve

The subcommittee agreed. If its recommendations are adopted by Congress, the effect will be to make Federal Reserve considerations on credit needs, rather than Treasury needs for low interest rates the controlling factor in case of a dispute.

The report said: "We believe that the advantages of avoiding inflation are so great and that a restrictive money policy can contribute so much to this end that the freedom of the Federal Reserve to restrict credit and raise interest rates for general stabilization should be restored even if the cost should prove to be a significant increase in service charges on the Federal debt."

Other Recommendations

Other legislative recommendations of the subcommittee were:

1. The reserve requirements of the Federal Reserve System, applicable to member banks, should be made mandatory also for non-member banks. These latter have their reserve requirements set by 48 different State laws. The reserve ratios for them are considerably lower than those of the Federal system. Wolcott dissented from this recommendation.

2. The Federal Government should cease buying silver for monetary purposes. "There are only 16 reasons for the present policy of Government buying of silver": Douglas cracked. "The 16 Senators of the eight Mountain States." The report declared the present policy was an uneconomic subsidy of no utility. A bill to end silver buying was introduced in the Senate on Wednesday.

Would Reduce Board

3. Reduction of the number of Federal Reserve Board governors from seven to five, and an increase in their pay, as a means to build up their "quality and prestige."

4. Creation of a National Monetary and Credit Council, comprised of the heads of the principal Federal agencies involved in monetary and lending operations. It would be purely advisory and consultative. The chairman would be the chairman of the President's council of economic advisers. (Wolcott dissented from the last suggestion, feeling that the chairman should be a "neutral" person, removed from Government attachments.)

In addition, the subcommittee report urged continuing and extensive congressional studies on such subjects as Federal bank chartering, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation coverage, policies of Federal credit agencies, Federal tax and expenditure policies, etc.

dozen Protestant ministers, dry leaders, lawyers, doctors, teachers, college students and delegates from several women's organizations such as the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

The packed hearing room applauded each as he finished, and at times, such as when Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, president of the WCTU appeared, applauded before the testimony.

There was virtually no questioning by members of the committee, most of whom were present.

However, Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.) asked several what plans the dry elements had in case the present bill was passed.

Donald W. Cloward, of the Northern Baptist Convention, admitted to Magnuson the next step would be "pretty close" to bringing back national prohibition. "That doesn't mean another prohibition amendment," he added hastily. "That was a mistake."

He then said that perhaps the next step should be to ask Congress for a "program of education to show in reality what liquor means."

The Rev. Albert D. Betts, Methodist, of Travelers Rest, S. C., showed how much liquor advertising was being run in national magazines.

Virtually every witness bore down on the advertising in magazines which children read. All asserted the ads were contrived to appeal to the young.

"There are signs," Cloward said, "of growing resentment against all kinds of high pressure advertising. Witness the recent commuter protest against the silly and tiresome commercials thousands have forced to listen to during the last weks of 1949 in New York's Grand Central Station.

"When a product is both harmful to health and a threat to the well being of society itself, then the people, through Government, have both a right and a duty to call such advertising into question."

The Federal Diary

Government Salaries Under Proposed Budget Total $6,700,000,000

Uncle Sam would pay $6,700,000,000 in salaries to Federal workers during the 1951 fiscal year under the President's budget.

This would be an increase of more than 300 million dollars over the present fiscal year despite an anticipated turndown in Federal employment. The President's budget provides for an "average" employment of 1,960,000 employes during the 1951 fiscal year, about 28,000 fewer than the expected average for this year.

INTERIOR: It would get several thousand new employes under the President's budget. A breakdown follows:

The Secretary's office would be cut from 433 to 396. Southwestern Power would go up from 185 to 268 for maintenance and operations. The Bureau of Land Management would be expanded from 1031 to 1341 employes. Bonneville Power, from 1560 to 2045 employes for its power transmission system, and from 704 to 918 for maintenance and operation.

Bureau of Indian Affairs would be boosted from 6530 to 7677 for administration, and from 2198 to 2363 for resources management. Geological Survey also would get a big increase, from 3995 to 4679 employes. Park Service would be expanded from 1660 to 1800 for management and protection; 1868 to 1945 for maintenance, but a decline from 703 to 647 for construction. Fish and Wildlife would jump from 538 to 672 employes for investigations, and from 1283 to 1288 for management.

Reclamation: Its operations and maintenance crew would be increased from 2519 to 3102; its general investigations staff from 812 to 1140, and an increase from 10,383 to 10,445 for construction and rehabilitation. Bureau of Mines would be expanded from 2973 to 3131 for conservation and development, and from 283 to 286 for administration. No change would be made in its health program.

CAPITOL HILL: The three new members of the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee are: Darby (R., Kans.), Dworshak (R., Idaho) and Leahy (D., R. I.). The first meeting of the full committee is scheduled for next week.

A major task for the committee will be the drafting of a postal rate increase bill. A bill, to raise about 120 million dollars a year, was reported out of the committee last year but the Senate never acted on it. Chairman Johnston yesterday had the bill recommitted to his committee. Meantime, the President has asked the Congress to approve a bill to raise 400 million dollars a year. A move to raise the letter postal rate from 3 to 4 cents is a clear possibility and it would raise more than 200 million dollars annually.

DOWN AGAIN: A drop of 14,211 Federal employes during November was reported yesterday by the Civil Service Commission. Only 244 of that number were in this city. The principal cutbacks were made by the Army, Navy, Air Force, Agriculture and Commerce.

NOTES: People are applying by the hundreds for the new civil service exam for census clerk and tabulating machine operator. No experience is required . . . Russell M. King, chief of Navy's Bureau of Yards & Docks' blueprint and photo-reproduction section, completed his fortieth year in the department this week . . . Senator Cain (R., Wash.) has in a bill to reorganiz the Interior Department along the lines recommended by the Hoover Commission . . . A reorganization plan will be sent to Congress soon to convert the Federal Security Agency into a department of welfare.

STATUS ORDER: Another order by the President to give civil service status to a few war service and temporary workers is slated to be issued before many weeks.

This would be a "clean-up" order. The order would be aimed toward bringing specialists and experts under the regular civil service system—people in rare and unusual war service and temporary jobs.

The Civil Service Commission will propose the order once its big postwar examining program is over. It takes the realistic view that it would be far too costly to hold competitive tests for all the specialist jobs. Several thousand, at the most, would get permanent status under the order.

PUC Hearing On Transit Fare Boosts Requested

Citizens Federation Wants Time to Study Proposal; ADA Denounces It

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

The District Public Utilities Commission was asked yesterday not to give the Capital Transit Co. authority to increase its fares without a complete investigation and formal hearing.

The request was made in a letter from Vernon V. Baker, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations. His committee plans to make a thorough study of the requested fare boosts, he said.

The company has asked permission to increase fares two cents to 15 cents, or six tokens for 80 cents, and to eliminate the $1.75 weekly pass. It seeks to put the increased rates into effect January 22 without a formal hearing.

Dillard Stokes, president of the District Industrial Union Council (CIO), attacked the company's request as "highhanded and arbitrary."

"In no event should any increase be granted until the company has demonstrated a justification for the increase and until an independent audit of its financial records has been made," he said.

Citizens' groups for the most part have not had time to get together and take a stand.

However, the District chapter of Americans for Democratic Action called the proposed rate boosts "uneconomical because every increase means less business and a worsening of the company's financial situation."

Woolsey W. Hall, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, said he spoke for himself only in calling the increase 'preposterous." Elimination of the weekly pass, in particular, would work a hardship on the middle-income group, he asserted.

A handful of letters from individuals received yesterday by the PUC reflected more concern over elimination of the pass than the 2-cent increase in fares.

A Capital Transit official said he received five calls on the fare increase yesterday. Three were for it, two against.

Meanwhile, the National Citizens Committee Against Forced Reading and Forced Listening yesterday asked congressional District committees to strip Capitol Transit of its franchise and give it to a company "which will not act . . . against the welfare of the community." This group, however, is principally concerned with getting rid of transit radios. It made no specific mention of the requested fare increase.

Winter Pays Flash Visit To Our Town

Winter paid the Washington area a hit-and-run visit yesterday, with rain, sleet and fleeting showers of snow. But it will depart again early today, according to the Weather Bureau forecast, and be replaced with temperatures in the upper 40's today.

The rain, sleet and snow showers began about 2 p. m., yesterday, shortly after the day's high temperature of 35 was reached at 1:10 p. m. The low was 31 at 7:05 a. m.

In downtown Washington, the sleet and bits of snow melted as fast as they fell. But in Silver Spring and other outlying areas, the sleet stayed on the ground for a time and made roads slippery and driving hazardous.

The warmth expected here is part of an air mass that surged northward from the Gulf of Mexico over the entire central part of the Nation yesterday, bringing thaws, drizzling rain, and threats of new floods.

In the past few days, at least 4000 persons were driven from homes in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Tennessee. The new flood threat yesterday centered around Maunie and Rising Sun, in southern Illinois, where the Wabash River rose dangerously near the top of levees and threatened to go over. Red Cross officials urged evacuation of 500 residents.

Safety Slogans

Contest Part Of Campaign In Arlington

That toot from a policeman's whistle doesn't necessarily mean trouble for the pedestrian or motorist in Arlington these days.

It's all part of a "Safety Slogan of the Week" contest, the idea of Arlington County's safety officer, Sergt. Frank Palmer.

Inaugurated last week for a 13-week period, the contest operates in this way:

Policemen will stop pedestrians and motorists whom they feel should be commended on their practice of safety rules.

Those stopped will be handed a special post card and in turn will be asked their name and telephone number. At the same time, they will learn the safety slogan of the week.

During a contest program, broadcast every Tuesday over Station WARL from 5 to 5:15 p. m., one of the approximately 150 persons to receive cards each week will be called. If he can name the slogan, he will receive prizes donated by local merchants.

So, whether or not your conscience is clear, pay heed to that whistle. It may pay.

Miller to File Bill for Stiffer Abortion Law

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), who had a major hand in revising District laws covering sex criminals, will move to tighten up the code here governing abortions, he announced yesterday.

The Nebraska man, who is a physician, said he will have a bill ready for introduction, probably next week, to amend the present statute, which carries lighter penalties than laws in a number of States.

His statement was made as an inquest was to get under way today into the abortion death of Mrs. Nina Cogar Campbell, 19-year-old mother of two children, whose brutally beaten body was found here in an apartment where witnesses said she had gone for an abortion. An autopsy showed she died from the abortion and not from the beating and biting which left marks over her body.

Representative Miller said yesterday he has been studying the District law and the statutes of other States. He declined to say what he will recommend in severity. The present law has a maximum five-year imprisonment penalty where no death results from an abortion. Where death occurs, the penalty is an indeterminate sentence of 3 to 20 years.

Several States make the crime of abortion where death results either manslaughter or murder.

Wilson Elected Rockville Fire Chief 19th Time

W. Valentine Wilson has been elected chief of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department for the 19th consecutive year.

Marbery F. Gates was renamed president for his 18th term at the annual election held in the firehouse.

In his annual report, Chief Wilson said at the Wednesday night meeting that the Rockville department had answered 155 calls and 122 rescue calls in 1949. Total worth of the department was placed at $196,498.39, with no outstanding debt.

The chief's award, presented to the fireman responding to the most calls, was won by Captain George E. Wilt, who answered 244 alarms, it was announced.

Besides Wilson and Gates, other officers named include: Frank H. Higgins, vice president; Herbert Yocum, secretary; Clarence E. Anders, treasurer; David E. Betts, general counsel; Dr. Gordon Rosenburger, surgeon; the Rev. Howard Cobbs, chaplain, and Thomas E. Slater, assistant chief.

Agent Swears Roberts Told Of His Pull

Testimony Details Events at Apartment In Girard St. Before Narcotic Roundup

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

James "Jim Yellow" Roberts bragged of "taking a couple of badges from cops" here and that "no one dares" enter his apartment, two Government witnesses told a District Court jury yesterday.

In the second day trial of Roberts, 41, and his well-dressed, red-haired wife, Evalina, 23, on charges of illegally transferring drugs, Federal Narcotics Agent Howard Chappell told how he and an undercover man rolled several "potted" cigarettes in Roberts' lavish 744 Girard st. nw. apartment last October 8.

Shortly after the agents arrived at Roberts' home, Chappell testified, a "playful" bit of gun sparring ensued, during which "Jim Yellow" stuck a .45 revolver into undercover man James Watson's ribs, Evalina produced a chromeium-plated automatic "with one round in the breach," and Roberts later brandished a switch-back knife.

"We all laughed off the little tiff," said Chappell.

Watson, a former friend of Roberts, and Chappell testified that they drove here from the latter's Cleveland

The defendant surrendered to the United States Marshal here October 28 after warrants had been issued for his arrest. He had eluded a Federal-Metropolitan police city-wide antidope raid on October 18. Authorities have described him as "one of the big fish" in Washington narcotics traffic.

Agent Tells of Boast

Roberts' alleged boast of influence with local protective officials was disclosed by Watson in relating his first conversation with Roberts.

"That cop isn't any good, but the rest of them are all right. The rest of them work with me," he said Roberts told him.

Watson said Roberts also told him "he had a couple of badges he had taken from cops" and that "if I got into any trouble, he could get me out of it."

Conversation Came Around

In their October 8 visit with Roberts, Watson said the conversation finally worked around to "pot," which he said was the common name for marijuana.

Soon, he said, Roberts brought out about 3 ounces of marijuana in the top of a hat box, and all of them, except Roberts, rolled several cigarettes containing the "stuff."

Watson continued that the next day he and Chappell returned to Roberts' apartment for breakfast and to watch the baseball game on television. Watson said he told Roberts he would like more of "that stuff." The witness told the court that shortly a man identified as "Croxton" showed up with an envelope gave it to Roberts, who later handed it over to Watson in return for $30.

Watson said the narcotics bureau had given him $340 to make dope purchases.

In cross-examination, Defense Attorneys Joseph and Josiah Lyman brought out that Watson had used two other alias names and that he had served time on a forgery charge.

At one point Joseph Lyman said to Watson, "isn't it a fact that you were told to plant it (drugs) in Roberts' apartment because the Government was going to make a city-wide raid?" Watson denied the allegation.

Judge F. Dickinson Letts adjourned the trial until 9:45 a. m. Monday.

Druggist Held In Dope Theft At Freedmen's

A 50-year-old pharmacist at Freedmen's Hospital was in District jail last night on charges he stole narcotics from the Government-owned institution.

He was indicted secretly by a grand jury here on January 3 and was taken into custody Wednesday.

The defendant is John A. Gordon, 2102 1st st. nw., employed as a pharmacist at Freedmen's since April 6, 1942.

On the same day Gordon was indicted, Seymour Adler, part owner of the Crosstown Pharmacy, 2005 14th st. nw., pleaded guilty to two counts of a seven-count indictment charging illegal sales of narcotics. Gordon formerly was employed as a part-time pharmacist in Adler's store.

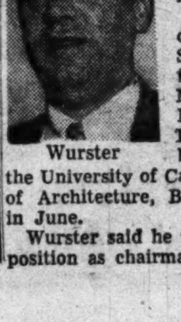
Adler was arrested last October 19, when police and Federal narcotic agents conducted a roundup of an alleged dope ring here and arrested 31 persons.

Herman A. Johnson, acting superintendent of Freedmen's Hospital, said the narcotics Gordon is accused of stealing had been damaged and put aside for credit to the hospital's inventory.

The drugs listed in the indictment include morphine sulphate and synthetic narcotic preparations.

Wurster Takes Post as Dean; May Give Up Parks Position

William W. Wurster, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, has accepted a new position on the West Coast and may not continue his local unsalaried post, he disclosed last night.



Wurster

Wurster, now dean of the School of Architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will become dean of the University of California School of Architecture, Berkeley, Calif., in June.

Wurster said he will discuss his position as chairman with his fellow commission members and the commission staff during the NCPPC meetings, January 25-27.

He pointed out that his new position is "only an overnight trip by plane" and that the President's budget calls for appointment of a fulltime staff director to supervise daily operations.

In accepting the California appointment, Dean Wurster is returning to the school from which he was graduated in 1919. He has always maintained an office in San Francisco from which he handled several private architectural assignments.

He has been in architectural work for nearly 40 years and the last 26 in the East. In 1943 he was appointed a fellow in the graduate School of Design at Harvard and in 1944 dean at MIT.

Added School Funds Sought For Southeast

A group of Southeast civic leaders yesterday indicated dissatisfaction with 1951 school budget requests and said they will go to Congress for additional construction funds.

Mrs. Ruth Glennon, president of the Congress Heights Parent-Teacher Association, said the area south and east of Anacostia River needs another elementary school and a junior high school.

Representatives of 18 organizations will meet at 8 p. m. tonight at the Congress Heights Methodist Church, 5th st. and Alabama ave. se., to formulate their views for presentation before the House Appropriations Subcommittee, now holding hearings.

The Commissioners are requesting $28,822,300 to be spent on the schools during the fiscal year beginning next July. They are asking land purchase funds for elementary school sites at 9th and Barnaby sts. se. and Mississippi ave. and Stanton rd. se. but no construction funds for the projects.

A 24-room elementary school to house nearly a thousand children now is under construction at 4th st. and Mississippi ave. se.

The civic leaders say there are now more than enough children in the two overcrowded schools that serve the area to fill the new building.

Congress Heights School has a capacity of 480 students and a present enrollment of 996. More than half the number are on part-time. Enrollment has increased by 200 in two years

Patterson Elementary School, built to house 600, has an enrollment of 1372 students, 679 on part-time. The school has added 400 students in two years.

The most recent school census shows more than four thousand in the area not old enough to attend school.

To find the exact number the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations has undertaken a door-to door survey.

The meeting tonight also will consider temporary measures to relieve the overcrowded schools. Double shift classes extending late in the afternoon, use of temporary and portable buildings, bus transportation to schools in less crowded sections of the city and use of churches for school rooms will be discussed.

Home, Sweet Home

Payne's Name Offered for New Span

The name of the composer of "Home Sweet Home," who lived a stone's throw away from the new South Capitol st. span was tossed into the name-the-bridge controversy last night.

Members of the Congress Heights Citizens Association suggested the name of John Howard Payne, composer, diplomat and man about Washington who lived at one time with his brother in Anacostia.

President Harry A. Leibrand, 629 Raleigh pl. se., pointed out that in the cases of the Key and Sousa bridges, both were composers and both lived near the present span locations. "It's looks like a logical choice," he said.

The group, meeting at Congress Heights School, 5th and Nichols sts. se., also indorsed the resolution of the Fort Davis Citizens Association, urging that Government land sales be by public rather than private bids.

Winners of th group's Christmas decoration contest were announced with first prize going to Mr. and Mrs. James C. Wells, 2921 7th st. se.; second, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Butler, 162 Qupsul st. se., and third, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ritter, 423 Newcomb st. se.

Randle Heights

Randle Heights Citizens Association last night voted to oppose granting an increase in Capital Transit Co. fares until a public hearing is held.

The group, meeting at the Randle Heights Elementary School, indorsed a resolution by the Fort Davis Citizens Association calling for revision or repeal of a congressional act authorizing city and Federal officials to sell park property without advertising intention to do so.

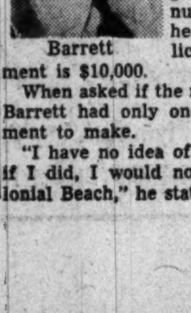
Barrett Says He'll Not Retire To 'Idyllic' Colonial Beach Life

Major Robert J. Barrett, Superintendent of Police, yesterday denied a published report that it is likely he will soon retire to live at Colonial Beach.



Barrett

The report stated he will soon succumb to the lure of a $5000 retirement salary and live out his days at the beach in Virginia. His annual salary as head of the police department is $10,000.

When asked if the report is true, Barrett had only one, terse comment to make.

"I have no idea of retiring, and if I did, I would not live at Colonial Beach," he stated flatly.

Barrett first joined the force in 1925, and 20 years later became the only man in the history of the department to head the detective bureau while holding the permanent rank of lieutenant. The job called for an inspector.

In 1946 he was promoted to captain by special presidential order, and in July, 1947, was appointed to his present position.

Rape Jury Told Of Blood Spots On Defendant

Blood was found on both the clothes and person of Hugh G. Mincey after he was arrested on a charge of raping a 4-year-old girl, a District Court jury was told yesterday.

Testimony about the blood was given by Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy during the second day of the 33-year-old iron worker's trial.

The child was found severely beaten and criminally assaulted September 13 in a rooming house at 518 H st. nw., where she lived with her mother. Mincey, also a resident there, was arrested a short while later.

Dr. Murphy said he could not state definitely the blood was human blood, but added he believed it was because of the way it reacted in chemical tests.

The coroner was followed on the stand by several residents of the rooming house, one of whom told the jury Mincey had tried to leave the place several times shortly after the girl was found in a coma.

The roomer, who said his name was Francis E. Leach, said he ran to the lobby when he heard the girl's mother scream, and as soon as he found out what had happened, told three other roomers sitting on the front steps to guard the door and see that no one left.

"Mincey came up to the door just as police arrived and asked if he could leave, but the fellows wouldn't let him. When police came in, he asked them, but they said he'd have to stay until they found out what had happened," Leach testified.

Detective Sergt. George H. Robinson, of the sex squad, testified Mincey came up and asked to go out. Robinson said he asked him why he wanted to leave and he replied he "wanted to get some supper."

Robinson identified a stained pair of girl's panties as those he found in the blood-spattered bathroom on the second floor, where the attack took place. He also identified a stained undershirt, T-shirt and blue jeans, which he picked up in the child's room after she had been taken to Gallinger Hospital.

The trial was recessed during the morning while the jury of four men and eight women visited the scene of the attack. In their absence, Mincey, who is the father of four children, was examined by doctors from St. Elizabeths Hospital, at the request of defense counsel, it was learned. Defense counsel refused to comment on it later.

The Rev. Dr. Lallou's resignation is effective January 1. He is a native of Philadelphia. He held a number of positions there before coming to Washington.

Author Asks Full-Scale Development Of Potomac

Gutheim Urges Basin Commission To Become Central Planning Agency

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Full-scale development of the Potomac River Basin, rather than sectional programs, was urged last night by Frederick Gutheim, author of "The Potomac."

A resident of the Washington area since 1908, the writer told members of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin that they should function as the central planning agency for this region.

No "great" legal changes were required for this, he said. Rather, "what is needed is a fresh perspective, . . . a larger view," a larger budget and a professional staff.

The writer urged the commission to "reach out boldly and demand the public attention to which your work is entitled and the political support by all intelligent parties and factions which it should deserve."

Master Plan "Obsolete" Already

The master plan developed by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission received short shrift from Gutheim who branded it as "obsolete before it was completed."

He termed the still unpublished report, product of two years' work, as "shamefully inadequate to the necessities of the present. Good will and good intentions, even of a brilliant chairman (William W. Wurster) and a capable planning director (John Nolen, jr.) cannot keep Washington from the reproach of the planned city without a plan."

The report's principal inadequacy, he declared, was that it was "not part of a regional framework." Furthermore, he said, it was "inadequate to the needs of the Federal city and fails to reflect the planning skill of our time."

Acts To Get More Funds

Earlier, the commission's executive committee took two steps in the direction indicated by Gutheim. The committee voted to ask the Maryland State Legislature to lift the present ceiling of $30,000 a year on state contributions to its operations. Other states will be asked later.

It also named a committee, headed by Harry G. Knox, technical adviser to the Pennsylvania Sanitary Water Board and vice chairman of the commission, to consider the future scope of the commission's operations.

The executive committee accepted an invitation from Alexandria, Va., officials to hold the commission's spring meeting there next May. A committee spokesman said several Alexandria problems of pollution and water supply would be discussed then.

The two-day Commission meeting opened yesterday at the Washington Hotel with a tribute by Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox, District Assistant Engineer Commissioner, to the group's past activities in "the post war awakening of the American public to the dangers of pollution."

Water Supply Still Ample

He cited particularly the Commission's activities in "the formation of the Monocacy River Watershed Council" to speed the stream's cleanup program.

An official of the Water Resources Division of the Geological Survey, C. L. McGuiness, senior geologist, assured the Commission the Potomac Basin water supply "shows no downward trend.

At times "the water levels have been pretty low, but there is no indication that they are getting progressively lower." he said.

In addition to surface supplies, there is "sufficient ground water available throughout the basin for the needs of the population." In fact, there is sufficient water in Southern Maryland and across the river in Virginia "for supplemental irrigation sufficient to grow truck crops in the sandy land there," he said.

MRS. ANN L. W. LEWIS

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 12 (U.P.). Mrs. Ann Louisa Lewis, Welsh immigrant mother of United Mine Workers Chief John L. Lewis, died today at the home of her daughter.

She was 91 years old and members of the family attributed her death to "old age."

Notified at Washington, where he has been embroiled in the prolonged soft coal dispute, Lewis left immediately for Springfield. Relatives said funeral arrangements would be made after his arrival tomorrow.

Mrs. Lewis had lived with her daughter, Hattie, in a house maintained by the UMW chief here for many years. She had been ill for the past year.

Lewis, feelings for his mother were deep and profound and he often dropped important affairs of his union to visit her bedside.

The mine chief was the eldest of Mrs. Lewis' eight children. He was born in 1880 at Lucas, Ia., where Mrs. Lewis had married Thomas H. Lewis, also a Welsh immigrant, in 1878.

A few years after John's birth the family moved to Colfax, Iowa, and a second son, Thomas, jr., was born there.

The father became a night watchman and policeman at Des Moines in 1889 and three other children, Denny, Howard and Hattie, were born there.

The family returned to Lucas in 1897, where young John L. Lewis, his father and brother Tom worked in the coal mines. Mrs. Lewis bore her last three children Raymond, George and Sarah Elizabeth, at Lucas.

History's first public showing of color television took place yesterday in Washington. Age 4 to 90, the public came away enchanted.

Simultaneously, Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) of the Senate Commerce Committee—which handles radio and TV legislation—demanded that the Federal Communications Commission clear the road for color TV before everyone buys a black-and-white set.

From inside the Walker Building, where CBS is holding the show for the rest of this month, came exclamations of "When can I get one?" and "Better than anything."

Some had expected that early color TV, like early color photography, would be relatively blurred. But probably no feature about the color TV impressed observers more than its almost startling clarity. The show originated in the studios of WTOP and was transmitted by WOIC.

Patty Painter, a quite fetching "Miss Color Television," Van Gogh paintings, bowls of fruit, flags of the Benelux countries, a fashion show, an "Alice-in-Color-Wonderland puppet show were featured.

Oldest of the 500 who saw the show was probably Mrs. Anna Schwarz, 90, of 2124 O st. nw. "Just beautiful," she said.

Several generations away, Jill Margolies, four-year-old New Yorker who's visiting her grandfather here, said she liked color better than black-and-white TV.

The only major objection found was that the pictures were too bright. Two out of five in an impromptu survey thought this, among them Allene Bildman, 20, George Washington University psychology major.

The Federal Communications Commission is presently considering which color process to approve. The CBS process is one of these.

Senator Johnson, whose committee handles radio and TV legislation, threw his full support behind the "let's have it now" bloc in a speech to the Federal Communications Bar Association.

"Since it is generally agreed that color television is practical," he said, "the public interest most emphatically would not be served by waiting until 30,000,000 other families have invested upwards of six billion dollars in black-and-white sets before switching to color."

Johnson termed color a "delightful improvement in telecasting and disclosed that his committee expects a report soon from five impartial scientists who have been studying it.

He said he is confident the report will "fortify and bolster the belief that we are ready for color television now."

Bill to Add Judge In Arlington Asked

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Jan 12.—State Senator Charles R. Fenwick said today the Arlington County delegation to the General Assembly is preparing a bill to give the county an additional Circuit court judge.

The bill, recommended by the County Bar Association, may be introduced early next week along with a flood of local measures affecting the nearby Washington area.

The Bar Association has asked for an assistant to Judge Walter T. McCarthy because of a severely crowded docket in Arlington.

Sales Tax Bill Penned

In other developments on the second day of the 1950 session, Delegate Frank P. Moncure of Stafford, penned his name to a 2 percent sales tax bill. It was proposed by Delegate Samuel E. Pope of Southampton.

Meanwhile, Delegate Edwin Lynch of Fairfax and Senator Andrew W. Clark of Alexandria, studied a recommended bill from the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors to change the county's executive form of government.

The proposal is apparently drawn from the law that applied to Arlington County, giving the voters an opportunity to select the "modified commission plan" or the "county manager plan."

Five Recommendations

Several prominent features of the latter system are altered in the recommendation, which includes:

1. A section to give the county manager administrative and executive powers, but subject to confirmation by the board of supervisors.

2. No provision for the county manager to submit a budget to the board.

3. No reference to a civil service commission, such as that in effect in Arlington.

4. No provision for restrictions on annexation such as Arlington has, saying that no part of the county shall be annexed by a city unless the whole county is annexed.

5. A section that provides for election of supervisors by magisterial district, whereas Arlington elects them from the county at large.

Suggests General Law

Another separate proposal sent to the Fairfax delegation by the board suggests general law on selection of school boards. It lists four choices for the voters:

1. Retain the present plan of appointment by a school electorial board. 2. Choose the board in an election. 3. Have the board of supervisors appoint board members. 4. Have the board of supervisors sit as the school board.

Falls Church Gets New Civic Group; It Favors Charter

A new citizens association has been organized in Falls Church and it has gone on record favoring the proposed Falls Church city charter, with two exceptions.

The association—the Northern Falls Church Citizens Association—covers the area bounded by Lee hwy., West Broad st. and the city lines. The exceptions it takes to the proposed charter are that it favors a referendum before a bond issue, rather than the proposed bond issue without referendum, and that it favors elected, rather than appointed school board officials.

Officers of the new group are William Van Allan, president; Louis Werner, vice president; George Walter, secretary-treasurer, and Herman Fink, A. E. Casgrain and Kenneth Stiles, directors. The board is to meet each two weeks and there is to be a general meeting on the eleventh day of each month.

The presentation will be made by Kenneth Parkinson, former secretary of the District Bar Association.

District Committee chairman, Senator McCarran played a major role in writing the 1942 law creating the existing Municipal Court and Municipal Court of Appeals of the District.

He was a sponsor of legislation, approved last year, to increase the size of Municipal Court from 10 to 13 judges, and was closely associated with the writing of the law that added a score of judges to the Federal judiciary, including three each for the District and United States Appeals Courts here.

Doctors Cautious In Reporting Acth As Leukemia 'Cure'

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—The hormone acth brings dramatic recoveries from acute leukemia, the quick-killing blood cancer, three physicians announced tonight.

But recoveries may be only temporary. It is still too early to tell, they said.

They told of tests on three children and two adults. All five recovered after getting the hormone for 24 to 30 days. But the disease came back on one child three weeks later. Acth again stopped it.

The other four still were well with almost no sign of leukemia from one day to five weeks after getting the hormone.

The report was made by Drs. O. H. Pearson, L. P. Eliel and T. R. Talbot, jr., of the Sloan-Kettering Institute and Memorial Hospital. They spoke at the New York Academy of Medicine.

County Defers Apartment Zoning Action

The Montgomery County Council last night deferred action on an application for rezoning of a 46-acre tract at the rear of the Bethesda Naval Medical Center to permit construction of an apartment development.

Miss Virginia K. Casey, applicant, was represented at the hearing in the Bethesda County Building by her father, Eugene V. Casey.

Casey disclosed plans for a 10-million-dollar project to include 1568 apartment units in nine buildings averaging eight stories at the Connecticut avenue and Jones Bridge rd. tract.

In answer to questions, Casey said plans called for dedication of land to widen both Connecticut ave. and Jones Bridge rd. to accommodate any increased flow tof traffic. He said he also is willing to provide land for a school if desired by the county.

Among the 50-odd persons present at the hearing were rperesentatives of the Montgomery County Civic Federation and three of its member bodies,

Slum Rebuilding Urged on Realtors

Rebuilding of the Nation's cities presents an undeveloped field for private builders without looking to the Federal Government for handouts, Richard J. Seltzer, Philadelphia, said yesterday.

He spoke to 500 presidents of real-estate boards here for a meeting of National Association of Real Estate Board officials. The six-day meeting concluded last night.

Seltzer, president of the Urban Land Institute, research group in city planning, told how Pittsburgh, Chicago and Baltimore were successfully attacking the problems of blighted areas and urban redevelopment.

Pittsburgh businessmen, he said, averted a loss of industries by having state legislation passed permitting property investments by insurance companies, establishment of urban redevelopment and parking authorities and adequate control of smoke and pollution.

Nathaniel S. Keith, director of slum clearance and urban redevelopment for the Housing and Home Finance Agency, told an afternoon audience that private enterprise can accomplish the bulk of the $1,500,000,000 redevelopment program scheduled to start soon. Funds were authorized by Congress last summer.

He said the program provides for a "write-off" of costs to make slum land available for redevelopment by private enterprise.

Housework Easy Without Nagging Backache
As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.
If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

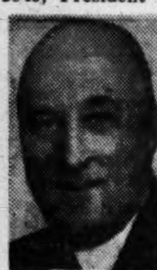
N. S. & T. Net Edges to New 83-Year Peak

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net operating income of National Savings & Trust Co. edged to an 83-year high of $488,709 in 1949, President Bruce Baird reported yesterday. The increase was $7213 over the previous record in 1948.



Baird

In his pamphlet report to stockholders, Baird pointed out that after provision for taxes and reserves for bad debts, net earnings last year amounted to $233,179.

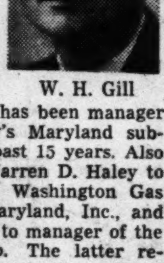
After payment of dividends, $113,179 was added to undivided profits as compared with $102,007 in 1948.

Total loans as of December 31, he said, were $13,514,451 as compared with $14,233,769 on the same 1948 date. Investment in Government securities shrank to $19,330,559 from $38,784,903.

In a comprehensive analysis of national and world affairs, Baird deplored a retrogression "in surrendering individual initiative and free enterprise into the hands of the Government." He added that we can learn many lessons from "the rigid regulation by Government of industry and labor with stifling and demoralizing effect upon individual freedom."

WITHDRAWS: Frank R. Jelleff yesterday informed the National Bank of Washington that he will no longer be able to serve as a board member "due to pressure of other duties." Jelleff, president of the F st. women's specialty store bearing his name, had been a director of the bank for more than 20 years. He had been reelected at Tuesday's annual meeting. Stock control of the institution changed hands last year and two United Mine Workers officials this week were elected to the board.

PROMOTIONS: W. Herbert Gill has been appointed assistant to President Everett J. Boothby, filling a newly created position at the Washington Gas Light Co. Gill, associated with the gas firm since 1911, has been commercial manager since 1932. Previously he was sales manager. Succeeding him as commercial manager is H. Clay Whiteford, who has been manager of the company's Maryland subsidiary for the past 15 years. Also promoted are Warren D. Haley to manager of the Washington Gas Light Co. of Maryland, Inc., and Carroll W. Ford to manager of the Rosslyn Gas Co. The latter replaces R. C. Brehaut, who resigned to engage in the gas utility business at Frederick, Md.



W. H. Gill

NEW DIRECTOR: Harry Malasky, appliance dealer, was elected a director of the Bank of Silver Spring. At the annual shareholders meeting President George T. Day reported that from November 10, 1949, to January 10 this year the bank had enjoyed a $1,291,339 increase in assets to the present total of $6,700,000. The institution opened its new drive-in quarters at 8701 Georgia ave. on November 10.

ODD LOTS: Apology to William E. Howard, vice president of the National Bank of Washington, whose name inadvertently was omitted from a list of reelected officers. . . . Folger, Nolan, Inc. of Washington is a member of a syndicate which is offering 70 million dollars of State of Washington veterans bonus bonds at a price to yield 0.60 per cent to a dollar price of 97 for 1974 maturities. . . . Leasing of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railway to Nickel Plate Railroad is reported under discussion. . . . United Air Lines carried 2,200,000 passengers in 1949, an increase of 13 per cent. . . . Capital Airlines reported it took in $586,940 from charter flights last year, more than half of which came from hauling some 50 football teams. . . . A production boom is reported under way in the auto industry with 145,323 units expected this week against 109,469 last week. . . . Greyhound Corp. proposes, subject to necessary assents, the exchange of one share of Greyhound common stock and $3.20 in cash for each share of Southeastern Greyhound stock.

List Tumbles In Last-Hour Selling Wave

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—The stock market went careening down the price scale today under a sudden strong selling drive.

It was the market's worst setback in 14 months and the climax of a seven-month advance. There was nothing in the news to account for the nosedive.

In a matter of minutes, beginning around 2 p. m., key issues dropped fractions to around 3 points before finding any kind of buying support. The speed of the decline left brokers gasping.

Orders to sell flooded into the market in such volume that the exchange used its "flash" system of reporting quotations. The ticker tape, at the worst, fell behind 11 minutes in reporting transactions and was that late during the greater part of the final half hour and at the close.

WHAT STOCKS DID

	Thurs.	Wed.
Advances	161	647
Declines	913	285
Unchanged	158	247
Total issues	1232	1179

Trading in the last hour alone totaled 1,350,000 shares. For the entire day volume amounted to 2,970,000 shares, the largest since November 3, 1948. Volume has topped two million shares for the past six full days of trading.

The market was the broadest on record, with 1232 individual issues traded. Of these, 913 ended lower and 161 advanced.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks cracked 1.5 points, severest loss since November 9, 1948.

Most active issue was International Telephone, down ¾ at 11, Adimral Corp., in second place, lost ⅝ at 22, and Radio Corp., third most active stock, lost ⅝ at 13¼.

Emerson Radio stood out with a rise of ⅜ at 18. Earlier in the day, though, Emerson had gained as much as 1½ points.

Other active and lower included U. S. Steel, at 27⅛, Packard Motor 4⅝, United Corp. 3¾, Electric & Musical Industries 1¾, N. Y. Central 12⅜, Southern Co. 12¼, Nash-Kelvinator 17⅝, Magnavox 12, and Pepsi-Cola 9⅛.

Corporate bonds took a last-minute tumble with stocks. U. S. Governments in the long-term bracket were trimmed 1/32 to 2/32 of a point in over-the-counter dealings.

Trust Suit Filed Against Sunoco by U. S.

Philadelphia, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Department of Justice today filed an antitrust suit against the Sun Oil Co., charging it with a "wide variety of coercive devices" in dealing with some 10,000 gasoline station operators in 18 States and the District of Columbia.

The Justice Department asked for United States District Court action compelling Sun Oil to cancel its contracts with filling station operators. Sun Oil is maker of "Sunoco" products.

The suit affects the whole scope of Sun Oil's operations, which the complaint says totaled more than 400 million dollars in 1948.

The complaint charged that Sun Oil binds operators whose stations are on lease from it to purchase all their gas, oil and petroleum products from Sun Oil and also to deal exclusively in automobile accessories for which the company is a distributor.

Robert G. Dunlop, president of Sun Oil Co., told the Associated Press that "all of the charges of unlawful action alleged against Sun Oil Co. in the antitrust suit are false and without basis of fact."

The Department of Justice action declared that dealers who fail to keep the terms of their contracts with Sun Oil are subject to such penalties as raised rent and lease cancellations.

One on the Aisle—

These Rich Blokes Are a Pitiful Lot

By Richard L. Coe

ALL I KNOW about high life is what I see in the movies, and I certainly feel sorry for the rich.

Metro is delving into the matter again in "East Side, West Side," at the Capitol, and you never saw such dull, drab lives.

A lot of the trouble, I think, comes from the newspapers they read. After her husband's been inexplicably absent till 4 in the morning, what does Barbara Stanwyck, as Jessie Bourne, do about her morning reading?

Does she, for instance, pick up an air edition of The Washington Post? Is that the intelligent New York Times on her lap? Or could it be the Herald Tribune? After all, the picture's told us that Barbara's had a genteel upbringing, been to a finishing school, is Gotham Big Rich and all that. Wouldn't you think she'd show some discrimination about her morning paper?

But no. There she is reading a hot-scandal tabloid with a full-page picture of her husband's fallen form crouched beneath some unknown male, all under a headline about "Playboys Battle."

It's not just Page 1 that's interested Barbara, either. Inside she's picked up a tiny notice that one of his old flames is back in town. "Is this," asks some school child columnist, "good news or bad news for a certain person whose initials are J. B.?"

But you can't stop me from feeling sorry for them. I do, though the tears don't come. It's just a stony, silent sorrow, I guess, even if they all look like Ava Gardner, Van Heflin, Cyd Charisse, Nancy Davis, Gale Sondergaard, Mason and Barbara. Even though nobody looks a day over 29 or acts a minute over 10, I can't weep a thimblefull. But, oh, the pity of it all.

"EAST SIDE, WEST SIDE," M-G-M release produced by Voldemar Vetluguin. Screen play by Isobel Lennart from the novel by Marcia Davenport. Music by Miklos Rosza. Photographed by Charles Rosher. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. At the Capitol.

THE CAPITOL'S stage bill, while not outstandingly impressive, is headlined by Gil Maison, a smiling young man who seems to have a way with dummies, dogs and a wonderful monkey; an adept, entertaining fellow . . . Margaret Phelan presents some smooth arrangements of popular tunes, arrangements that have the sophistication the picture so pantingly strives to suggest . . . The Three D's start things off with especially smooth sailing between trapeze bars, and Pritchard and Lord have a dance combine of ballet and taps . . . Milt Slosser's back at the organ with a dip into past hits and a twist on "Lucky Old Sun."

With such abysmal taste in journalism, what can you expect of a heroine? Her poor little life is bounded by friends who keep asking her: "How is everything with you and Brand?" (Brand is the movie name for weak James Mason.) Or else they say: "Is everything all right, dear?"

Poor Cafe Society

Naturally, Barbara (I can't think of her as Jessie Bourne) has a perfectly terrible three days. These culminate in the break-up of her marriage, she in that time having met a noble policeman who's invaluable to the government, and having taken him away from his adoring sweetheart. This quick romance with a man who obviously has the good sense to stay away from such newspapers as Barbara indulges herself in seems to me founded on sand.

Now please don't tell me that life among the cafe society set (that's the way these people sometimes refer to themselves) is like this. If Marcia Davenport and Isobel Lennart, who adapted the screen play from her novel, say so, I'll believe it. I'll believe that people who drop into swank spots for a nightcap, who have wood paneling in their private offices and who have duplex apartments on Gracie Square have nothing whatever to do all day but wonder who is with whom and catch up on the tabloids juke-journalism.

THE REV. Newton Gordon Cosby, former regimental chaplain of the 327th Glider Infantry Regiment in the 101st Airborne Division, criticizes the "unrealistic" portrayal of an Army chaplain in "Battleground," at the Palace.

Though he admires the rest of the picture, Mr. Cosby, who prayed with his men at the invasion of Normandy and dropped with them in the invasion of Holland, states that the sequence of the chaplain praying before the Battle of the Bulge was not the type of service held in such circumstances.

"Instead of showing the soldiers praying to God," he remarks, "we see a chaplain giving a pep talk, explaining why 'this trip is necessary.'

Many Live in Area

"Men who realize they are about to die are certainly in no mood for a philosophical talk on why the war is being fought. I know this is true. I was there. Hollywood apparently has no conception of how to authentically depict the deeper moral and spiritual motivations."

Mr. Cosby, 32-year-old pastor of the Ecumenical Church of the Saviour, 1707 19th st. nw., frequently plays host to his old friends of the 101st Airborne, many of whom live in the Washington area.

The Church News Service describes the Ecumenical Church as one "concerned with the whole family of the church in the entire inhabited world, interracial, interdenominational, international, considered in the light of its common origins and common objective."

L'AMOUR DE LUXE: Barbara Stanwyck and James Mason seem very pleased with each other in their lush surroundings of "East Side, West Side." The Metro film version of Marcia Davenport's novel is on the Capitol screen

No Fairfax Tax Rise Seen by School Bond

No increase in the present tax rate in Fairfax County will result if the proposed $10,500,000 school bond issue is passed by voters of the county, F. W. Robinson, chairman of the County School Board, promised last night.

He spoke at a meeting at the Oakton School in the county. The meeting was sponsored by the Fairfax Parent-Teacher Association, to answer questions of workers who are seeking signatures to a petition calling for a referendum on the bond proposal.

Workers reported that they already have the legally necessary 1000 signatures, and expect to have 2500 to 3000 signatures to file.

Robinson also expressed the hope that the present reassessment of Fairfax County property will increase the assessed valuation from 60 million dollars to 100 million dollars for the county.

He said that if a projected plan of the City of Alexandria to annex a substantial amount of county area is approved, Fairfax County may lose up to 30 percent of its present assessed valuation. But, he said, Alexandria will take over two schools, Lincolnia, and Lee-Jackson.

Poulenc Solo 'New Music' To Listeners

By Paul Hume

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony returned to Constitution Hall last night.

The second of their two local concerts for the season brought three pieces of music: Handel's Water Music, Brahms' fourth symphony, and a new piano concerto of Francis Poulenc. The composer appeared as soloist in his concerto.

Handel's music was heard in the exquisite version by the late great Irish composer-conductor, Sir Hamilton Harty. It was played in a way to stand the hair on end: brilliantly with perfect tone and taste.

Poulenc has written a thoroughly pleasant concerto. His gifts are those of a master craftsman, smoothly knit, with an easy style. Many listeners commented happily on that "new music." Poulenc's pianism is of the finest and the orchestra, with its clever scoring, was equally able.

Munch views Brahms' most imposing symphony as a work needing light and air. The first movement was almost casual, lacking the customary bombast. The scherzo went like a thunderbolt and the finale with its powerful variations, worked up to a violent close.

The Boston Orchestra does not yet play as one man for its new conductor. There were moments in the scherzo when the cellos were of more than one mind—the attacks of the strings sometimes came at two moments. But this was as true under Munch's predecessor.

Devaluation Was 'Long Step' To Solve Problems, ECA Says

In devaluing their currencies European nations "took a long step" toward solving their economic problems, the Economic Cooperation Administration reported yesterday.

But, it added, the fundamental solution to their difficulties is integration, the binding of their economies together to permit free trade in a great mass market of 270 million producers and consumers.

The ECA diagnosis came in Administrator Paul G. Hoffman's sixth quarterly report to Congress, covering last July, August and September.

The devaluation at the end of that last month, he said, brought European price levels more nearly into line with those of the hard currency areas, and prepared the way for a "direct attack" toward balancing and freeing their trade.

But by itself, he went on, that will not resolve the basic problems or "remove the shackles that are holding back international trade." These other steps are needed:

Relaxation of trade restrictions; lowering of tariffs; reducing costs; increasing production, and maintaining internal fiscal stability.

"A longer-range goal," Hoffman's report said, "is the integration of the Western European economy into a single producing and trading area."

Encouraging steps in this direction, Hoffman pointed out, were the negotiations for removing quota restrictions among Marshall Plan nations, and the arrangements for progressively broadening intra-European payment clearings.

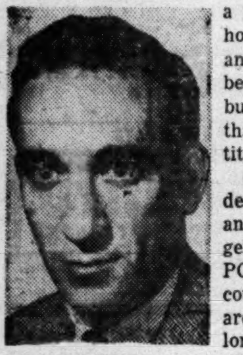
This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE YEAR 1950 has already witnessed its No. 1 comeback story, you'd have to say. Unless the Nats win the pennant, Ben Hogan's gallant bid for the Los Angeles Open golf title will probably stand as the peak display of resurgence by any athlete or group of them.



POVICH

In the hats-off department, Hogan must be rated tops. Less than a year ago, he was bedridden in a Texas hospital, his arms, legs and back in traction and his life in doubt after a head-on crash between his car and a hefty cross-country bus. If he lived, there was the high doubt that he'd ever swing a golf club in competition again.

Only a couple of weeks ago, he was still deemed far out of any contention for such an important tournament as the Los Angeles event, with a field that rivaled the PGA in caliber. He was back on the golf course, true enough, but he was getting around on a motorized scooter between his long shots, so weak were the legs.

He didn't exactly win the L.A. Open with its $15,000 prize money, but he came as close as he could without winning. He wound up in a tie for first place with Sammy Snead, after averaging 1 under par for the four 18-hole rounds.

THE SENSATION was that little Hogan, after freely confessing that he expected to tire after the first round, actually shot better golf in his final rounds. He posted a 73 on the first day and then threw three consecutive 69s at the field. And when rain forced the postponement of his play-off against Snead for a week, there was general satisfaction among golf fans for the greater rest it would provide Hogan.

The medics, too, are grateful for Hogan. He was an example, they say, of the kind of spirit and attitude that aids recovery. His eagerness to return to action speeded Hogan's recapture of his health. He never wavered in his determination to get well and catch up with the fellows who were taking down the purse money in the tournaments he used to win. He's won the L.A. Open three times before.

Even when he was in the Army, Hogan's pride in his golf was unabated. Joe Novak, president of the PGA, tells how little Ben chafed at the constant references to Byron Nelson as "the world's greatest golfer." Hogan kept saying, "Wait until I get out of the Army. I'm the world's greatest golfer, not Nelson." He'd recall, too, how he used to beat Nelson when both of them were caddies on the same Texas course.

For such as the more personable and smiling Nelson, the carefree Jimmy Demaret and the hilly-billy antics of Sammy Snead, the galleries reserved most of their applause. There was always the tacit acknowledgement that Hogan was probably the best golfer of the lot, but he lacked the oomph and gallery-appeal of his colleagues, and Snead replaced him as the best box-office draw.

Thus at Los Angeles last week, Hogan for the first time in his life was the sentimental favorite over the popular Snead. Even as Jack Dempsey gained wider popularity after his tough break in losing to Tunney on the long count at Chicago, Hogan came into his own after adversity struck him down. Almost unanimously the crowd was pulling for the game little figure of Hogan to take it all at Los Angeles.

HOGAN'S DISPLAY of fortitude against the physical pain he must have been enduring during the four-day grind, had something of a parallel, however, in Snead's own exhibition. Snead's gameness was of a different type, involving the mental hazards, not the physical. A supposedly weak putter, Snead had to sink 10- and 15-foot putts for birdies on the last two greens to get his tie.

Earlier in the tournament, Snead had been missing putts all over the premises and appeared to be out of it until he fired that final 5-under-par 66 onto the scoreboard. But when the chips were down, so were Snead's putts. It recalled Gene Sarazen's definition of Snead as a putter.

"Snead's reputation as a poor putter is one of the worst deserved," declared Sarazen. "Sammy isn't one of the good putters among the pros, but he isn't one of the weak ones, either. And what is generally overlooked is that he's probably the best long-putter in the whole business."

Carl Joyce, Hoya Freshman, Meets Country's Top Milers

A mere freshman will carry the Blue and Gray of Georgetown University into the Junior Board Mile in the Washington Star Games at the Armory Saturday night.

Carl Joyce, a stocky, big-chested frosh from Boston, is rated by Coach Frank Sevigne as one of the best in the country

Joyce, national prep school mile and half mile champion at Seton Hall has been breezing the mile in 4:13 outdoors

His best showing to date against top competition was a 4:13.8 effort in Chicago two years ago when Don Gehrmann finished on top, four yards in front of Joyce.

Gehrmann will be back in the Star Games as will Sweden's Alf Holmberg, Jack Twomey, national 1500-meter king and Brownie Ross.

Joyce, who turned in a creditable 4:21.6 mile effort in the prep school championships last year after setting a prep record for the half mile earlier in the evening. He has been rated by track coaches and enthusiasts as the greatest schoolboy prospect for the middle distances since Ted Merideth of Penn.

Feerick Admits 'Interest' in Santa Clara Job

Feerick conferred with Dennis Heenan, athletic director, after the Caps lost a 73-72 decision to the New York Knickerbockers.

Heenan said, "Bob told me he was interested in the job and we're interested in him, among others."

Ray Pesco, present Santa Clara mentor, has resigned, effective March 1. Feerick played at Santa Clara in 1939-40-41.

The Caps face the Warriors in Philadelphia tonight and the teams play a return game at Uline Arena Saturday night.

It's a good chance for the locals to hit the .500 mark. In 22 games with Philadelphia, the Caps have won 17. They've taken both this season.

Thorpe Seeks $456,760,000

PHILADELPHIA, JAN. 12 (AP). Jim Thorpe, the fabulous Carlisle Indian regarded by many as the greatest athlete of all time, hopes to collect $456,760,000 for his tribe from the Federal Government.

The near half-billion dollars belongs to his Sac and Fox tribe, Thorpe claims.

"I've never mentioned this," genial Jim remarked, "because most reporters have always been interested in my athletic career.

"This Government claim, however, has been on my mind for years.

"Here's the story: In 1814 the Government purchased 70,000 acres from my tribe, which was part of the land used in the famous 'Land Rush.' That money was deposited in a St. Louis bank for the Indians. The compound interest on that land purchase now amounts to $456,760,000."

Thorpe said he's got figures and letters proving his claim. All he's got to do is collect.

A spokesman at the First National Bank in St. Louis, the city's largest, said any story that nearly a half-billion dollars is on deposit in a St. Louis bank is "ridiculous."

Baylor's Baugh Bid Ruffles Marshall

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Clubowner George P. Marshall has not heard directly from Sammy Baugh, but Marshall appeared nettled over the reports that Baylor University was trying to lure the Redskins' good right arm.

Baugh has been approached to take over the head coaching post by Baylor officials and has said that he's "interested."

Marshall was reluctant, at first, to say anything. "I don't know anything about it and would rather wait until I hear from Sam," he said.

In a moment, though, he was criticizing Baylor. "I don't think any first-rate school should go around the back way to do business.

Marshall Peeved

"Baylor's certainly aware that Baugh is under contract to me. I think the president should come to me first before going to Baugh. We're the ones who should be asked for a release."

Asked pointedly if he'd make Baugh stick to the one-year contract he signed last November, Marshall said he didn't know.

"I would want to see that he's taken care of," Marshall added, "I've always handled Baugh's business affairs."

Of future Redskin plans for Baugh as coach, Marshall said, "he couldn't be head coach just as I don't think he can be head coach at Baylor. The job would take him away from his Texas ranch too much. Head coaching is a 12-month job."

Marshall did say he thought Baugh would make a great coach, particularly in pro ball.

There's no question that the famed 35-year-old passer will have to stop playing football one of these years.

Other Candidates

For most of those 13 years, Baugh has been threatening to play just one more season. Way back in 1938, he stated publicly he was going to quit and take up coaching.

It's little known but in the spring of 1937, Baugh assisted Ray Wolf at North Carolina as backfield coach.

Word from Waco, Tex., yesterday was that the Baylor athletic committee will meet next week to consider a new coach and that Baugh probably will be the most popular choice.

Dr. W. R. White, university president, listed applicants as Lowell (Red) Dawson, former Tulane and Buffalo Bill coach; Homer Cole, former pro and Arkansas A. & M. coach; Bob Walsh, coach of St. Benedict's College, and John Tomlin, coach of Port Arthur (Tex.) High School.

Others considered prospects include Dud DeGroot, West Virginia; Homer Norton, former Texas A. & M. coach; Ray Morrison, Austin College coach; H. N. (Rusty) Russell, SMU assistant coach, and Don Faurot, coach of Missouri.

Terps Lapse Into Old Form, Lose, 59-49

Special to The Post

Richmond, Va., Jan. 12.—Maryland, after showing recent signs of awakening, lapsed into a listless game here tonight, bowing to Richmond, 59-49, in a Southern Conference test.

The defeat was the sixth in seven conference games for Maryland which has only 2 victories in 14 starts.

Richmond, gaining its first conference victory of the season, was kept in it early by the foul-shooting of Bob Shaw. Shaw who canned eight of nine attempts during the field goal famine, wound up high scorer with 18 points.

Bob Murray and Frank Armsworthy each tallied 10 points for Maryland.

Buddy Lewis Ridicules Nats' Contract Cut

Gastonia, N. C., Jan. 12 (AP).—Buddy Lewis, Washington Senator outfielder, disclosed here tonight that he has received his 1950 contract and that it calls for considerably less than his 1949 salary.

Asked about his plans, Lewis told a reporter:

"I don't even know whether I'll play baseball this year or not. If I do play, I don't think I'll take a salary cut."

Lewis, a veteran of 11 seasons in the American League, all with the Senators, described the salary slice as "more of an amputation than a cut."

Lewis said he had neither signed nor returned the contract.

He said he would have a talk with Clark Griffith, Washington president, before making any definite plans.

After going on the voluntary retired list in 1948, Lewis returned to the Senator last year and experienced the worst hitting year of his career. He was used irregularly. He currently operates an automobile agency in Gastonia.

Last October Lewis is said to have told Griffith, "send any kind of a contract, I'll sign it."

Guepe Points Finger at Iowa

RICHMOND, VA., JAN. 12 (AP).—Coach Art Guepe of the University of Virginia has delivered a fast return punch at the president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Karl Leib, head of the NCAA, had said any school not located near a big city would be forced to subsidize its athletes to stay in the major football ranks. Believing the statement directed at Virginia, admitted violator of the NCAA sanity code, Guepe hit back hard.

"Leib's own school, the University of Iowa, is located at Iowa City, and I know this town is not one whit larger than Charlottesville," said Guepe. "I know because I lived there two years while on Navy duty.

"Yet this same school last year twice played West Coast foes, UCLA and Oregon. And it played Notre Dame in addition to its Big Ten opponents."

In view of this, Guepe said he couldn't understand how Virginia could be classified as a major football power.

"We are only trying to play represntative colleges and universities in our own area," declared the Cavalier coach.

Cook Paces Terps To Rifle Lead

Led by Olympic Champion Arthur Cook, Maryland's No. 1 varsity team took the lead in the Maryland Rifle League last night, turning back Kensington No. 1, 1428-1406, for its tenth straight victory.

Cook shot 295 out of a possible 300.

Even at Turner's Arena

The Ring, Plus 2 Boxers, Sometimes Fails To Add Up to Fight, Our Haight Finds

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

BEFORE ARTHUR GODFREY gets hold of this one, I'm going to play around with it a bit myself.

Ever hear of a boxer married to a boxer? Neither did I until the publicity handout on next Monday's ring feature at Turner's Arena was sneaked into our office.

In my time, I've known boxers who were so egotistical they loved themselves, and others who were so mean they hated themselves, but I haven't encountered one who had anything more than a passing friendship for another. The boxers I know just aren't built that away.

But I guess we have to live and learn.

According to Press Agent Dave Herman, who is reliable with the possible exception of his wrestling notices, and Gabe Menendez, who is reliable, Lino Garcia, the young Cuban featherweight champion who meets Jimmy Cooper, has the unique distinction of being the only boxer married to a boxer.

AND PLEASE DON'T ask who wears the trunks in that family because they both do.

Yes, I'm supposed to believe that Garcia's wife, Sylvia, whom he married in 1946, is a Cuban lady boxing sensation.

She is said to be a lightweight. Her hubby is a featherweight.

Just suppose she took off a few pounds, got into a family argument with pappy — who knows, maybe the fight of the year, with the Cuban title changing hands, would be fought in some hotel room with not even a television camera watching.

This Mr. and Mrs. Boxer angle leaves the pun field wide open.

FOR INSTANCE, when they were married did they kiss the bride or box her ears? Would you hay Mrs. Garcia was a knockout? Are there any little cauliflowers around? Do they like soap box operas, have a boxer dog or eat box lunches?

This could go on and on—for instance, did the groom put a square ring on the bride's finger?

But seriously, I'm told that Wifey Sylvia not only boxes but has managed, seconded and trained her husband. She is slated to be in Garcia's corner for the fight here.

It will be tough on Garcia if Cooper beats him. Imagine going home feeling all groggy and in addition to getting a lot of lip, you get a lot of clip, if you know what I mean.

40 of Mason-Dixon Schools Form Bloc For Showdown Vote

By Will Grimsley

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Dixie colleges rose today in a seething rebellion that split the National Collegiate Athletic Association wide open in a fight over the sanity code.

The Southern, Southeastern and Southwest conferences, in a joint indignation meeting, voted unanimously to stand back of four Southern institutions threatened with expulsion because of admitted code violations.

One by one, more than 40 college representatives stood up to announce they would vote "nay" Saturday when the convention will be asked to kick out Virginia, Virginia Tech, Virginia Military Institute, The Ctadel and possibly others.

Three of the original prospective "black list" have not been identified.

"We must use all our influence to get out the vote for the Virginians," W. L. (Bill) Alexander, athletic director at Georgia Tech, announced at the joint meeting. He presided.

These were other quick-breaking developments of a riotous day with the Nation's college athletic chieftans:

1. The Citadel announced it already had quit the NCAA, but planned to join in the fight on the floor.
2. Virginia announced, through President Colgate Darden, jr., it probably would pull out of the NCAA also unless the code is changed—regardless of the expulsion action.
3. A move was started to rip the NCAA of its governing powers and return to its position of two years ago as merely a schedule-making body.
4. Karl Leib, president of the NCAA, called Saturday's meeting the "showdown," determining the future of the sanity code and the NCAA.

Byrd, Maryland Join Dixie Bloc

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Dixie's Rebels ganged up on the National Collegiate Athletic Association today and found a new ally in their fight against the sanity code.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, now president of the University of Maryland and formerly football coach there, asked for permission to appear before the council and back up the arguments that the code needs revision. Dr. Byrd is a strong advocate of athletic scholarships.

There is no indication that Maryland is one of the seven on the NCAA's secret list of schools that face expulsion.

After Byrd appeared before the NCAA committee, Karl Leib, president of the NCAA, said they had an "interesting discussion," but declined to elaborate.

Virginia's Darden Appears Before Committee, Gets 1-Minute Brushoff

The fireworks started in the early afternoon when all seven violators were given the privilege of presenting their cases before a joint meeting of the NCAA's executive committee, council and compliance committee.

Virginia's Darden, a former Governor of his State, came to the meeting armed with a statement proposing an "honest and workable" code offering above-board athletic scholarships, rigidly administered by the university.

The present code, adopted two years ago, restricts grants in aid to the needy and those of high scholarship and stipulates athletes must work for board and keep.

When Darden entered the room of the NCAA's policing and governing groups, he was prepared to make his lengthy statement.

"We are supposed to probe into compliance and opportunities of compliance and have no jurisdiction over recommended changes," the Virginia president was told by Dr. Leib, the presiding officer.

"We have gone over that before," Darden replied and, assembling his equipment, departed.

"I suppose I was in there less than a minute," the educator stated later.

Representatives of other schools came and went, some of them discussing compliance at great length.

Saturday's Showdown Will Be Battle Among Three Groups

Leib declined to report on the results of the conferences. He said all seven institutions recommended for expulsion appeared before the NCAA group.

"We will have a showdown Saturday," he said. "We can expect a battle among three groups—those who say they're going ahead under the present code, those who say they're not going ahead and those who say they're going ahead, if changes are made.

"If we aren't able to show the sanity code has teeth, then the code is dead and so is the NCAA as a regulatory body."

After making their appearances before the NCAA council, the

The Interhigh laegue's two top teams, Wilson, which many pick to win the title, and Central, which won the crown last year, are favored in tonight's double-header at Uline's Arena.

Meanwhile, the Catholic High League offers its own doubleheader at the Catholic University gym with DeMatha, led by their 6-6 center, Frank Fuqua, taking on little St. Anthony's.

The Cadets have run up a string of eight wins without an outstanding star. Only one of the Johnnies, Bill Mattingly, is among the top five scorers in the loop. Mattingly has 21 points while Mike Nolan of Gonzaga leads the scoring parade with 34.

Out at Ritchie Coliseum in College Park, the Prince Georges League presents another doubleheader with Bladensburg meeting Maryland Park at 7:30 and Greenbelt facing Mount Ranier at 9 p. m.

Dixie Rebels Split NCAA Wide Open

Southern recalcitrants joined the three-conference gathering two floors below.

There, athletic directors and coaches rose to criticize the code, as now worded, to defend the position of the violators and to recommend ways of beating the code in Saturday's fight on the floor.

"None of us can conscientiously vote against Virginia or any of the others on the carpet," said barrel-chested Bob Neyland, Tennessee coach and athletic director. "How can we vote to expel them when all of us are guilty ourselves?"

The Dixie delegation was polled on how it would vote when the issue comes up Saturday.

17 Southern, 11 Southeastern, 6 in Southwest Stand Together

Seventeen Southern Conference schools, eleven in the Southeastern, six in the Southwest and a half-dozen independents promised by verbal vote they would stand behind the seven sinners.

D. S. McAlister, dean at The Citadel, declared his institution already had withdrawn from the NCAA and added: "But if we're on trial we want a hearing and we'll cast our vote Saturday."

The Southern bloc made battle plans for the general meeting which will include, as a starter, a solid vote for an amendment to the code permitting a year-around training table.

The Southeastern Conference suggested this amendment. It would give athletes three free meals a day for the entire year. The present code allows only one meal a day.

If this amendment is accepted, Virginia, Virginia Tech, The Citadel and Virginia Military Academy said they possibly may be able to abide by the revised statute.

This is the compromise hope of a convention that threatens plenty of explosives in its windlp session.

If the amendment fails, the Southerners said they would try to block the expulsion move by a vote. It takes a two-thirds majority of the some 300 members to expel.

"We will ask for a written member-by-member vote," declared Alexander.

The Dixie delegation also approved a plan for asking a year's additional study of the cases, if all other moves seem to fail.

Darden quietly outlined Virginia's position in a press conference following the day's scattered sessions.

"We want to be honest above everything else," he said. "We would like to see a code offering athletic scholarships with the colleges responsible for their administration.

"We feel it is hypocrisy to give the boys clock-winding jobs to help pay their way. This is allowed under the sanity code.

"We think it's too much to ask a boy to play football, keep up high academic standards and work also."

(The United Press reported that Darden also said: "Our alumni have raised $25,000 to help athletes and we want to use that money to pay their room and board—nothing more. We all know that alumni help athletes at just about every school in the country. This is a violation of the sanity code. I don't know what the other schools will do, but we will not pretend we are complying with the code when we and everyone else knows we are not."

Darden said that if Virginia is either expelled or resigns from the NCAA, it will attempt to play football with other expelled schools. If not, Virginia will quit football rather than sacrifice its principles.)

Somehow Darden Amendment On Athletic Scholarships Lost

Darden said he had proposed an amendment to the constitution calling for above-board athletic scholarships but "this somehow got lost."

"I was surprised not to find it in the list of amendments to be considered," he said. He declared he also mailed a copy of his proposal to member institutions.

Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson, secretary of the NCAA, said he received no such proposal from the Virginia president. Leib also expressed no knowledge of it.

"Even if we are not expelled I don't see how we can honestly continue in the NCAA under the present code," Darden said. "We can't abide by it."

"We may have to withdraw from the organization, anyhow."

Dr. W. S. Newman, president of Virginia Tech, represented his institution. He pointed out how his boys were tied up with military duties and studies which didn't give them time to work.

The Citadel also is a military school and in a similar situation. The Citadel's case was presented by Athletic Director D. S. McAlister.

Col. William Couper, executive officer, spoke for Virginia Military Institute.

Howard Whips Mexico, 61-47; Davis Has 13

University of Mexico's barnstorming basketball team stopped here long enough to absorb a 61-47 defeat the hands of Howard University last night at Uline Arena before 2000.

The small Mexican team made a game of it for a half, trailing, 23-21. Then Howard pulled away after intermission.

Ernie Davis, with 13 points, and Bill Sykes with 12, led the Bisons to their eighth victory in 11 games.

Mexico made only 10 field goals, feeling that height handicap, but dropped 27 of 34 foul tries.

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks:

Looking over the list of winners of the Rosedale Stakes at Jamaica we find Enfilade the first home in 1917 and again in 1945. The Thoroughbred Racing Association points out that they were different horses, of course. Enfilade, by the way, is the dam of C. V. Whitney's The Veep, named for Vice President Alben W. Barkley. After 15 years a name can be used again if the first horse fails to reach top prominence. It's interesting to note that Man O'War had a predecessor of no relation other than the name, nor was there any similarity. The oldest horse to run last year was So Good, a 17-year-old who might have been good in his day but could garner only a fourth position in three 1949 starts.—Bill.

MEN READ CAREFULLY

Saturday morning at 9 sharp, I want to talk to 20 men who are really ambitious in securing a position that will give them steady employment the year 'round. In other words, there are no laying-off periods, and consistent income is the income that really counts. It doesn't matter what your past employment has been, all we ask is that you be willing to study and learn as we teach you our work. It will also be necessary that you be willing to get along on $75 to $85 per week for the first 4 or 6 weeks while learning our work. A car is essential. You must also be able to give the names of 3 people who will vouch for your honesty and integrity. We prefer men who are married or men who have some measure of responsibility. I would also like to talk to a few men who are mechanically inclined and who know a good thing when they see it. Therefore, if you are honest and of good character, willing worker, neat in appearance, come and talk with me.

'This I Remember'

Hoover Seen As Victim of Circumstances on Leaving Office

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

LIFE began to change immediately. As soon as my husband's election was established the Secret Service assumed responsibility for his protection. Our house in 65th street was filled with Secret Service agents, and each and every guest was scrutinized and had to be identified when Franklin was in the house.

Soon after the new year my husband paid a visit to Washington. At that time President Hoover asked him if in the interim before inauguration he would take joint responsibility for certain policies. Franklin, however, felt that until he had full control he should not share the burdens.

Later in the winter I paid the customary visit to Mrs. Hoover and decided how, on moving in, I was going to use the rooms. She showed me some of the rooms herself, but when I asked to see the kitchen she turned me over with relief, I am sure—to the housekeeper and to Mr. "Ike" Hoover. Mr. "Ike," the chief usher in the White House, I had met before in President Theodore Roosevelt's day. He expressed a desire to talk to me before I left about arrangements for Inauguration Day.

The Inauguration of 1933 was not a light-hearted occasion for the man going out of office, or for the man coming in, or for the people of the country as a whole. President Hoover had been through a very trying period. His great anxiety had been reflected in his inability to preserve his equanimity in daily contacts with the people in the White House. We were told afterwards how difficult it had been for him even to say good-morning or smile at the people of his household.

I have often thought with sympathy of what he endured in that critical time. It must have been hard for his family, too, watching him bear that heavy burden, each day growing wearier and more depressed as he faced insoluble problems. It could not have been easy for him to tell the public that prosperity was just around the corner and stubbornly to hold to the belief that this was so. He was a victim of circumstances and economic and political methods which could be remedied only by severe and courageous new actions. He had served the country well during World War I, and there is no question that during his term of office he wanted to do what was best for the country. He has, since those unhappy days, rendered service to his country and the world on numerous occasions.

Hoover 'Very Silent'

MY husband often told me of his Inaugural Day drive with Mr. Hoover from the White House to the Capitol and of how he tried to keep up a cheerful conversation in the face of a very silent companion. Crowds were cheering, and unconsciously my husband responded until suddenly he realized that beside him Mr. Hoover sat motionless. In my husband's heart and mind, there was hope, but he realized that the man sitting next to him could not possibly be experiencing a similar state of mind. Finally, as the car passed one of the Government buildings which had been begun during Mr. Hoover's administration, my husband found himself pointing to the steel structure and remarking on the "lovely steel." It must have sounded inane, but it indicated how desperate he was in his search for small talk.

My own trip to the Capitol with Mrs. Hoover has left me with few recollections, though I think I asked her whether there was anything she would particularly miss in leaving the White House. She told me that no longer to have the feeling of being taken care of and never needing to make train reservations or to plan anything for herself would make a great difference to her. I decided then and there that I must not allow myself to become dependent upon such attentions.

The condition of the country was so serious on that first Inauguration Day, March 4, 1933, that very little time was expended on purely social amenities. Almost at once my husband began calling meetings, and the first thing that happened was the bank holiday. Personally I was a little concerned because we had been staying at the Mayflower Hotel for two or three days and I had no extra cash. I went to my husband and asked him what would happen if we needed some money very soon. He smiled and said he thought we should be able to manage whatever was absolutely necessary. I began to realize that there were certain things one need not worry about in the White House.

Fortunately for me, Miss Thompson had been willing to come with me to Washington. She had lived in New York while my husband was Governor and had made only occasional trips to Albany. Up until now Miss Tully had helped me as well as Franklin, but from the time we went to Washington she worked only for my husband.

Long before Inauguration Day, Mrs. James M. Helm had offered to help out at the White House . . . Mrs. Helm, the daughter of an admiral and the widow of an admiral, had lived in Washington for many years and knew all those formidable individuals called "cave dwellers"—a term applied to the few people who really live in Washington and are not birds of passage.

Later her volunteer work developed into a permanent position of social secretary.

Some Festivities

EVEN though the times were so serious, there were some festivities for the young people. I remember how very angry one of our sons was when he returned from a dance at a late hour in a borrowed, ramshackle car and was stopped at the gate. Naturally he could not identify himself, and it was a long time before anyone was found who recognized him. Finally he was allowed to come in and go to bed. The next morning he said: "What kind of a place is this anyway, where you can not get in when you are living here?" This led us to the discovery that every time a member of the family came in or went out the exact times of departure and return were noted in the usher's log. The same record was made for anyone who came in, whether for a short or a long visit.

Like most American children, mine had been in the habit of raiding the icebox whenever the pangs of hunger were noticeable. The first time they discovered that the icebox was kept locked at night they had another cause to upbraid me!

Soon after we moved into the White House, Anna and her two children came to be with us. She was then separated from her husband but not yet divorced. Franklin, jr., and John were still in school. James was married and living in Boston. Elliott was separated from his wife and had left soon after the Inauguration to look for a new job in the Southwest. He was firmly convinced that he had no use for the East and never wanted to live there again. His first marriage had been a quick disillusionment. He had found no community of interests and realized rather soon that what had attracted him to his wife was a feeling of sympathy. She had been having some of the same difficulties that he himself had been through. He was too young, and so was she, to know that a successful marriage requires more than a desire to marry and a feeling of mutual sympathy.

As I saw Elliott and a young friend of his start off on this trip, my heart was heavy. I did not doubt that he would find a job, but I had a feeling of separation and uncertainty about his future. I realized that my husband was far too busy with the problems of the country to be really concerned or even to have personal problems drawn to his attention.

Mr. 'Ike' Shocked

IN the first days of his administration my husband was much too busy finding ways and means of meeting the financial crisis in the country to be bothered with anything else. So I went to work organizing the household and the secretarial staff which was to help me in my duties as the President's wife.

Unconsciously I did many things that shocked the ushers, especially Mr. "Ike" Hoover. My first act was to insist on running the elevator instead of waiting for one of the doormen to run it for me! That just wasn't done by the President's wife.

I had asked for a telephone on the desk in my sitting room. Two days went by and no telephone. When I made inquiries I discovered that the telephone men had not been able to get into my room because I did not leave it long enough. It wasn't considered proper, I was told, to have men working while the President's wife was in the room. I quickly remedied that by insisting that I was quite accustomed to having workmen around.

From the beginning it was my habit to breakfast in the West Hall at 8 or 8:30. My husband breakfasted in bed, and I always went to his room as soon as his breakfast tray was brought up. However, I stopped only to say good-morning, since he liked no conversation at this hour which he devoted to reading all the newspapers. Some papers he merely scanned, but many articles he read in full. He was always more careful about reading the opposition than what his supporters had to say.

Our grandchildren were the only ones allowed in Franklin's room while he ate his breakfast. Once I heard much noise and calls for help and, on going into my husband's room, found two little girls, Sara and Chandler, jumping up and down on his bed, shouting at the top of their lungs: "He's my grandfather!" "No, he isn't—he's mine!" Franklin sat trying with one hand to keep his breakfast tray from being swept off the bed and holding the telephone in the other. "Wait a minute, Hacky," he was saying desperately to the operator, "I can't talk to Paris just yet."

After breakfast each morning I went to my desk in my siting room where I saw in turn the housekeeper, the usher and the social secretary.

Not Food-Fussy

FRANKLIN had never been difficult to please about food, but in Washington he virtually never went out for meals, and food prepared by even the best cooks can become monotonous. His trips provided a welcome break, but as the years went on and his health became less robust, Mrs. Nesbitt, the White House cooks and I found it increasingly difficult to tempt his appetite.

Some aspects of housekeeping in the White House I think may be of general interest. For one thing, I think few people realize the expenses of a man who holds the public office of President or even Governor. Both the Federal Government and the State of New York pay the wages of the household help. Whatever it costs to feed them, however, came out of my husband's own pocket. I have always thought that the government of both the State and the Nation should pay these food bills. In Albany we had 8 to 10 regular household employes, and in Washington usually about 30. In the White House the yearly thousands of visitors meant that we had to employ many more people than we should otherwise have needed, simply to keep the public rooms clear. In addition, the Christmas parties we gave every year for the guards and all the people working in the White House on the grounds and in the garage were always paid for by my husband.

Formal parties and state dinners were paid for by the Government, but if Franklin and I had any of our children or personal friends at such a dinner, we had to pay their pro rata share of the cost. Then, of course, the requests for contributions were countless, and a President is always expected to give more generously than anyone else. Every President, I am sure leaves the White House far poorer financially than when he went in.

Every morning, after Mrs. Nesbitt and I finished our discussion of housekeeping matters, the usher would come to my sitting room. His purpose was primarily to check over the comings and goings of guests and members of the family. He also had to have a list of any people who were coming to see us. Otherwise they would not be admitted.

Then Edith Helm arrived with her lists of invitations to public functions, of receptions I should hold or whatever else she thought I ought to do. These three interviews took comparatively little time. I think Edith Helm often felt I did not take enough interest in the social side of White House duties, but at that time they seemed to me relatively unimportant.

For instance, the teas. It seemed to me utterly absurd and wasteful to receive anywhere from 500 to 1000 people of an afternoon—none of whom probably I would ever see again—shake hands with them and then have them pass into the dining room to be given a cup of tea or coffee by Mrs. Helm and Miss Thompson.

Small Talk

AFTER receiving the tea guests I would walk into the state dining room and engage in a few desultory conversations. Then I would go upstairs, and the party would come to an end. At first I did not realize that I had to leave the room before anyone else was permitted to do so. The ushers, who wanted people to leave within a given time in order to get ready for whatever was next on the calendar, always had to remind me. It was hard for me to remember that I was no longer just Eleanor Roosevelt, but the wife of the President.

I soon discovered that, particularly to people from out of town, the White House had a very deep significance. I was only a symbol, as wives of Presidents had always been and would always be. The White House was a place where the people's hospitality was dispensed to the representatives of other countries, and in a way it was with a sense of personal ownership that citizens of the United States walked through the simple but very dignified and beautiful rooms. I think, to many people, the White House in itself symbolizes the Government and, though standing and shaking hands for an hour or so two or three times a week is not exactly an inspiring or restful occupation, still I think it well worth while. I did it regularly, three times a week during the winter months. We came to think that the small amount of formality and pageantry contributed by the ushers and the junior aides was valuable.

At the first few receptions of each season my arms ached, my shoulders ached, my back ached, and my knees and feet seemed to belong to someone else. However, I soon grew accustomed to it, and I was lucky in having a supple hand which never ached.

My husband found the formal receptions very tiring. Since standing for long periods of time with braces on was something of an ordeal, he tried never to have more than a thousand persons to greet. Immediately after the reception he went upstairs. Now and then I would send to his study a few people with whom he wanted to talk, but only on special occasions. Usually there was too much work awaiting him before he could go to bed.

Edith Helm was irreplaceable in bringing me to see the necessity of protocol. All protocol was foreign to me and until I learned that it was really required for two purposes — protection and orderly procedure—I resented it deeply, as do most Americans.

No other place in this country considers protocol—except the customary deference shown to people because of age or personal achievement — but Washington lives by a rigid schedule. Some of it I still think is unnecessarily complicated, but by and large I know it is necessary. Foreigners living in Washington would understand no other procedure. Also, the importance that most Americans attach to the Government posts they hold, whether elective or appointive, is probably justified, for in prestige most public servants find their only return. Certainly financial returns are slight in comparison to what the majority of them could earn in business or in a profession.

My Lucky Day

I know today is Friday and . . . It is the thirteenth day . . . But I have no misgivings and . . . No fears to chase away . . . I do not care if mirrors fall . . . Or ladders loom above . . . Because today I met you and . . . I know I am in love . . . I have a lucky feeling that . . . My dreams are coming true . . . And everything is beautiful . . . Because of finding you . . . The sun is so much brighter and . . . Tonight the stars will shine . . . And every day my heart will say . . . I want you to be mine . . . So let the blackest cat appear . . . And spill the salt some more . . . As long as you are at my side . . . To cherish and adore.

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JANUARY 13, 1950

Mary Haworth's Mail

Only Son, 24, Happily Wed, With Good Job, Feels His Welfare Depends Upon Escaping Possessive Mother, Who Hangs on Glumly

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 24, an only son, very happily married and have a good job with a future. However, my mother, whom I have always loved, threatens this adult happiness.

Mother demands complete domination of my life and resents all efforts on my part to mature. Emotional disturbances, frustrations and acute feelings of inferiority surrounded my childhood, and when we were in our early teens (years before we married) my wife became pregnant and my parents arranged to have the pregnancy terminated. I am deeply sorry and ashamed and have suffered guilt tensions about this delinquency; and because mother knows this sin of mine, I feel I can't make a clean break. Must I always pay?

Through the efforts of an Army psychiatrist I saw I was in a complete rut. I intend to mature, to be independent and build a real marriage with several children and love. But mother refuses me this freedom. She makes an unspoken demand that I relate every meeting with friends, as well as every telephone conversation, every marital decision, also my every move. If I fail to tell her she looks deeply injured, saying that I neglect her terribly.

Mother's Outlook Is Anxious, Cynical

MOTHER has no friends, no outside interests, dislikes women, quarrels with my father about the most ordinary human failings, believes the world is cruel and that no one is to be trusted. She proclaims her love for my wife loud and long, yet she has wept that I no longer love her, no longer confide in her, and that my wife has taken my whole heart; and this I fear is almost true. I refuse to return to the dominated life, and mother will not meet me on a planc of adult friendship.

Psychiatric help is not for her, as she is totally unaware of the need, and dad never would listen to such a suggestion. The field is surrounded with black shame for my parents. So how can I get along with her pleasantly and avoid awkward silences, grudges, long apologies and listening to her feelings of persecution? Will this situation only grow worse since I've only pity for her now that love is fast slipping away! E. B.

Man's at War With Himself

DEAR E. B.: Obviously your most deep-seated emotions are still at war with your conscious purpose to attain health and strength of personality. As for instance, you say in one breath, "I intend to mature and be independent and build a real marriage—," and in the next breath you sigh, "But mother refuses me this freedom."

Your mother has long since spent her real power to shackle your spirit. When you were an infant, a child, an adolescent still dependent upon parental support, she could intimidate you physically and terrorize you emotionally to keep you in control; but now that you are adult in years and social status, there's nothing to prevent your steady growth into fullness of life,—nothing except irrational fears of displeasing her, implanted in your unconscious long ago.

These fears are inexpressibly great and terrible from the child's helpless viewpoint, for they suggest that displeasing the all-powerful mother is to run risk of being cast into outer darkness (figuratively or literally), there to perish in disgrace.

Better to Grow Than to 'Break'

IN YOUR CASE the adolescent sin, of which your marriage is constant reminder, links conscious guilt feelings to this dreadful unconscious complex, and the whole tangle is more forebodingly felt because your mother knowingly helped hide that mistake, as if putting you on probation for offending her. Due to this stale mixture of senseless terror—appropriate to childhood but not to adulthood—you confusedly say, "I feel I can't make a clean break; must I always pay?"

Your youth and will-to-health are mighty factors in your favor, but bear in mind that "Rome wasn't built in a day" and that you can't hurry reconstruction of personality. It takes time.

It shouldn't be necessary to make a clean break from your mother in order to establish yourself in a new relationship to her. Your solid growth will take care of that, provided you hew to the line of your purposes sighted with the psychiatrist's help. But for encouragement I'd like to point out that you are making progress already—as witness your ability to feel sorry for your muddled mother, while refusing to surrender your soul to her. That's a pretty mature reaction, so practise it placidly. M. H.

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

ARTIST BRUNO BERAN is always willing to leave his studio to see what Mme. Beran is cooking. And small wonder! She has recipes from all over the world at her fingertips and won first prize for her desserts at the famous Cordon Bleu cooking school in Paris. Both M. and Mme. Beran teach at the Washington YWCA.

Mme. Beran Bares Her Secrets

Kitchen Artist Seasons With Romance

By Sonia Stein

YOU may season your cooking with salt and pepper if you like. Mme. Irene Beran seasons hers with romance.

Now teaching classes in European cooking at the YWCA in Washington, Madame Beran has training in half a dozen cooking schools and an exciting, romantic life to look back to for inspiration in her daily exchange with students.

Holder of a diploma from France's famous Cordon Bleu cooking school, and from Spanish and Viennese schools as well, the widely traveled Madame Beran's recipes are varied. Most of them she presents to her class like secrets of state.

The famous chocolate Sacher Cake from Vienna with its frosting "as smooth as a skating rink" is very, very special she tells her students. And, nibbling the delicate morsels at the end of the class, the students agree it is very, very special.

Husband An Artist

Her seasoning of romance comes about partly through Madame's essentially romantic temperament, and partly through the rich and adventurous life she has lead.

Herself a former concert singer, she is the wife of artist Bruno Beran who now combines teaching with portrait work. They grew up together in the town of Brunn, now a part of Czechoslovakia, and Madame remembers the first time she saw her husband—a tiny violin prodigy in a velvet suit. He turned to painting before their marriage years later.

Traveling all over Europe with her husband, the pretty young singer with the floor-length red hair had a gay time. She'd find her husband painting landscapes by following the smell, she claims. "He always picked the most horrible places to paint!" And she'd take him back to their hotel for dinner—a complete dinner she'd cooked on an alcohol stove.

"A good cook can cook anywhere," she insists.

Cook and Showman

Madame is first and foremost a superlative cook, but she is also a showman. Everything is "first class" and "we make nussing but elegant things" explains madame with her curious mixture of an accent. "I speak six languages—all of them terrible," she adds narrowing her enormous blue eyes into merest slits as she crinkles up her face with laughter.

But this wonderful and terrible mixture of accents is as much a part of her classes as her creamy mousse au chocolat ("More French than this I cannot be") and the veal chops in paper which are to be served "to the King of England, or on your wedding day or when you get your divorce."

Her classes at the YWCA, a new series of which begin next week, are small but only because the kitchen is small. Men and women, professional cooks and dilettantes, ladies in mink coats and working girls, cram the kitchen to watch Madame work and to sample the finished masterpieces.

"First you taste with your eyes, then with your nose, then with your mouth," explains Madame.

"Cooking is like life and love—you can't explain. You see, darling?" she says. But then she perversely buckles down and gives a painstaking explanation of exactly how the dish in question must be made.

"I am so foolish," she scolds herself as she presents one of her favorite, secret recipes to her students.

Some of her recipes are not only secret but valuable. When the Berans arrived in Canada with $10 apiece after escaping the Nazis in France, they made a living as best they could between Madame Beran's cooking lessons in a department store and Monsieur Beran's portrait work. After they moved to New York, Madame summoned up her courage and approached "the most elegant stores" with baked cheese item.

"With my heart pounding I went into the stores on a gloomy, rainy day, not daring to hope," she recalls. Seven out of eight of the shops she approached placed orders with her. "I began to get hundreds of dollars out of a little black hole of an oven," she laughs.

Recipes for Living

Along with recipes for food, Madame Beran's students get recipes for living.

Learning how to catch a wandering crepe suzette before it falls to the floor, they are also taught that "with good will, everything in this life can be fixed. With bad will nussing!"

Madame Beran and her husband have had occasion to know this truth well in the past 10 years. Within 24 hours after the Nazis had taken Paris they were at the door of Bruno Beran's studio.

Madame Beran gave her husband an unceremonious push into the cellar, locked the door and faced the German soldiers alone.

But bravado didn't help when 200 of M. Beran's paintings—the work of 12 years—were seized. For three months, confined to the house except for futile trips to the empty markets, the Berans barely existed, sleeping in the bathroom or the kitchen—wherever there was a bit of warmth in the freezing house, until frail M. Beran became ill.

When her husband had recovered sufficiently they walked from Paris to Madrid, Mme. Beran disguised as a nun, her husband as a mental patient.

After crossing the border, the Berans were helped to establish themselves by a religious order for whom M. Beran had done some painting in Paris.

Paints Diplomatic Set

In Madrid, M. Beran began to paint members of the diplomatic set and their wives. In Washington he is still busy with the diplomatic circles, having sketched six of the Ambassadors' wives in pastel, the delicate medium for which he is even better known than for his oils.

When the Berans were hunting for an apartment in Washington they looked long and hard for one that would have an adequate studio for him and an adequate kitchen for her. When a compromise had to be reached, Madame Beran had her way—and her way was to have a small kitchen so that her husband might have a good studio.

The studio is hung with a tremendous variety of paintings. And eddying around all, is the tantalizing fragrance of something being cooked by the other artist in the kitchen.

Folks Are Wearing All Sorts of Things These Days—Take a Gander!

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THINGS I'VE LIKED LATELY:

FEMININE FRIPPERIES: Mrs Harold Burton's Swiss Bonnet, an authentic copy of an 800-year-old model! It's a head-hugging velvet cap, fanning into a wide net halo . . . The garnet jewelry Mrs. Millard Tydings wore at Mrs. Dwight Davis' New Year's Eve ball as accompaniment to the fabulous vermilion satin Worth ball gown of her grandmother's . . . the brooch, a 4-inch wheel of garnet spokes, the matching necklace fashioned in smaller scale.

The most dazzling jewel seen this year—Mrs. Cornelius Bretsch's jumbo diamond bowknot pendant, set with two enormous pink diamonds . . . The five pearl-centered aquamarine buttons worn on Mme. U Khin's Burmese blouse, and her engaging necklace, a gold-set diamond peacock which when touched oscillates on a gold-and-diamond chain.

Mrs. Omar Bradley's new evening purses of glistening brocade, sent her as a gift from Japan . . . Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, jr.'s, trick belt—2½ inches wide, punched with round holes through which a silk scarf may be drawn . . . Scarf ends tie the belt.

Mrs. A. Peter Dewey's amusing, baroqueish choker—an antique Russian geggaw made of rhinestone and topaz-set gilt buckles, tied with ribbons . . . The gay spectacle frames worn by Mrs. William C. Foster, wife of ECA's Deputy Administrator . . . They're pale plastic covering cobwebby black lace.

Eunice Kennedy's coffee-colored Griffe evening dress, the whole skirt tiered with tiny lace-edged velvet ruffles . . . Mrs. Henry O. H. Frelinghuysen's black satin evening slippers, rhinestone soled and heeled, worn as bright accent to a Dior strapless, split-skirted, black velvet sheaf . . . The one-and-only day dress worn by Mrs. Morris Cafritz—olive silk, bulky sleeved, buttoned low under each arm.

GENTLEMEN'S FINERY: The Royal Stuart Scotch plaid evening vest worn to all holiday parties by Yale student Hugh Auchincloss, jr. . . . also his mink-lined overcoat, heirloom from an elegant grandfather.

The crimson corduroy waistcoat worn to holiday parties by Jack Burling . . . The snap-on bow ties worn on occasion by James J. (Jerry) Wadsworth (like the one that fell off Bob Hope's adam's apple in "The Great Lover," remember!).

The rash of masculine house slippers stitched in petit point by loving wives—Mmes. Jasper du Bose, Nathan Scott, Lauriston Hardin—with their husbands zodiac sign.

AMUSING ART: Distinguished political columnist Joseph Alsop's oil painting, with a clock tower, a real clock face with music-box equipment hidden behind the canvas.

INTERIOR DECOR: The setting for Mrs. Joseph Davies' wonderful luncheons and dinners—for 50 guests and up. Small tables, each one set in a different color—pink china, glassware, center piece, flowers, candles on one; sapphire blue on another; pale green on a third; gold at the large, head table; red on a fourth—the different ensembles apparently unnumbered, each lovelier than the last.

NEW PEOPLE: Slim, brunette, olive complexioned, artistocratic featured Edna Sims Kelly, the new woman member of Congress from Brooklyn. She achieved eminence through years of persistent, unacclaimed work—heading charity drives; reorganizing, revitalizing, local women's political clubs, carrying on research for members of New York's Legislature on bills pending and about to be endorsed.

Patent Leather Turns Up In Sleek Spring Raincoat

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 12—You'll never guess what they've done with patent leather. Made a raincoat out of it.

At today's showing entitled "Patent Preferred," the star attraction was a copper-colored raincoat, hat and umbrella, all made of paper-thin patent—the glistening leather which we once wore only on our feet.

The patent rage, which is due on our horizon early this spring, is having a world premiere in New York. Next month it will shine at the Paris openings, where designers have taken a great fancy to it.

Imported Raincoat Modeled

Lawrence of London, who has already completed his collection, sent a dashing raincoat to today's showing. Made of red, water-repellent faille, it has black patent leather collar and cuffs, side buckles and is matched with a leather-crowned hat.

But the patent leather items that you and I will own this spring will probably not be so ambitious. We'll more than likely be content with matching shoes and bags, a belt, or perhaps a touch of it on a hat as it is done by Sally Victor.

Prettiest of the new patents are those in pastel shades. Shoes and bags are done in beguiling tones of lemon yellow, pale pink, blue and green. There is a wonderful shade of smoke gray which is especially effective in the shiny leather, and of course there will be navy, black and red.

Mangone Silhouette Is Slim

The fourth day of the Couture Group showings opened with a display of coats and suits by the old master—Philip Mangone.

Washington women who are fans of Mr. Mangone will be happy with his silhouette for 1950—slim and traditional with a strictly tailored outline. Mr. Mangone himself must rejoice in the return of this well-tailored fashion, for throughout the "New Look," it was evident he never cared for exaggerated lines.

Now he gives us again the straight skirt, the shorter jacket, with just a hint of stiffening in the shoulders. His coats usually flare from the shoulder lines, are both long and short, and most are meant to be worn over a slim suit.

Fabric plays as great a part as the cut in the House of Mangone. There are suits in firm worsted and muted shades of milateen, beautiful imported flannels and tweeds. A gray worsted suit is made gay with a jacket lining of imported striped taffeta, matching the blouse.

For those who prefer them, there are also cardigan suit jackets, and those that are belted and bloused in the back.

Other showings today included those of Jacques Fath, presented by Joseph Halpert, Mollie Parnis, Ceil Chapman and Elizabeth Arden.

More to the Pig Than Pork Chops and Squeal

By Lucia Brown

THERE'S more to the pig than pork chops and a squeal; Literally dozens of delicious cuts come from this portly animal. And all can help revive food budgets suffering from holiday spending, for pork is cheaper now than in years.

Consider the smoked, boneless shoulder butt. This is a piece of meat that's full of flavor and savor. And when you buy one, you're getting all meat—a good, solid chunk that tastes like succulent ham when well prepared.

PORK SHOULDER BUTT

Simmer a smoked, boneless shoulder butt (weighing 2 to 3 pounds) for 1 hour or until nearly tender in enough boiling water to cover.

Remove from the water and place in a baking pan. To bring out extra flavor rub on one of the new monosodium glutamate products.

(These are sold under various trade names. You'll find they add zest to many dishes, really accent the natural flavor. Use about ½ teaspoon for each pound of meat.)

SWEET-SOUR SPARERIBS

Two pounds spareribs, 1½ cups water, ¼ cup raisins, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 green peppers, 1½ tablespoons cornstarch, ¼ cup sugar, ¼ cup vinegar, soy sauce.

Cut spareribs in serving portions and brown in frying pan over moderate heat, about five minutes on each side. Add ½ cup water, the raisins and salt. Cover pan tightly and cook over very low heat 20 minutes. Add green peppers, cut in six pieces each. Stir in cornstarch blended with sugar, vinegar and one cup water. Cover and continue cooking over low heat for 30 minutes. Stir occasionally and add more water as needed to prevent drying. Before serving, add any sauce for taste. Serve with rice or hominy grits, a green salad and a dessert of baked pears.

AWVS Luncheon

A good turnout is expected for the Washington Unit of the American Women's Voluntary Services luncheon being held Saturday, January 14, at 12:30 o'clock at the Hamilton Hotel. Picture of AWVS activities in Washington during the war will be shown,

A MOVIE star is singing in the Old New Orleans Latin Quarter this week; Carlos Ramirez, Columbian baritone, is familiar to devotees of Hollywood musicals. His career includes more than that, though. The handsome Latin is making 32 appearances in a personal appearance tour this season—he leaves the Old New Orleans for Rio de Janeiro. Originally specializing in opera, his voice is powerful and rich.

FRANCITA, dancer at the Casino Royal, combines native dances with novel lighting devices and "radium" costumes. She has a real talent for sultry dances. Al Aldrich holds up his end of the show with some clever juggling. Monette and Ramon, a handsome ballroom team, and tapster Carol Rogers complete the show.

BACK in town for a two-week engagement are the nine clever Frenchmen, Les Compagnons de la Chanson. Their satires and harmonies are put across with as much spirit as ever—this is their third engagement at the Shoreham in a year.

ARTINI and Consuelo opened at the Mayflower Lounge this week. They're an old story to Mayflower patrons, who want their favorites to come back every few months. Henry Brandon and his band opened with them. Fashion shows in the Lounge are back in full swing after the holidays; "Six Fashions at Six" will be held every Friday, and there's a regular Monday luncheon show.

Mrs. Arnold, who will be introduced by Mrs. R. C. Williams, will describe the work of the Boys' Club, one of two agencies selected by the Officers' Wives Club to share in the proceeds of its annual benefit. The Research Hospital project, which was one of the recipients of the benefit funds last year, will share again this year.

Bridge and a social afternoon will follow the program.

Costume Ball for Trumans To Be Done Up in Style

—By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure—

SOUTHERN belles, Confederate generals, Egyptian princesses, Napoleons, North and South American Indians, plus dozens of historical characters, will be on the town Tuesday, January 17. All will be heading to the American Newspaper Women's Club's costume ball honoring President and Mrs. Truman.

Scene of the festive event, which will attract diplomatic, official and residential society, will be the Pan American Union. Orchids are being flown in from South America for the occasion. The scarlet-coated Marine Band will play for the reception and Sidney's Orchestra will swing out the tunes for dancing.

There will be old-fashioned dances, such as the Williamsburg Blue, performed by active club members, headed by Miss Ruth Brane. Vice President Barkley has been asked to call the square dance numbers.

Assistant to the President John R. Steelman is chairman of the floor committee. Others on the committee will include 14 White House aides, the Norwegian Ambassador and dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, and the Turkish Ambassador, Feridun C. Erkin.

Others on the floor committee will be Associate Supreme Court Justices Tom Clarke and Harold Burton, Senator Homer Ferguson, Edgar Morris, Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, Charles S. Dewey, Robert Freer, Col. Curt Schiffeler, Barry Freer, William Canby and K. Bruce Mitchell of New York City.

About Cleaning Corduroy Chair

I would appreciate it very much if you could give me a good method of cleaning a coral-colored corduroy chair. It is very soiled and so light colored that every speck of dirt shows on it. C. M.

You may be able to improve the appearance of this chair by shampooing it with soap suds. Dissolve one cup of mild soap flakes in two cups of water and whip until a heavy froth is formed. Apply just the suds to a small area of upholstery with a brush. Work with a circular motion, removing suds as they become soiled and adding clean suds until area is clean. Wipe off suds and thoroughly rinse area by wiping several times with soft cloths wrung out of clear water. Frequently change the rinse water for complete rinsing.

Continue washing, overlapping the area you are washing with the one last washed until the entire chair is clean. Set out of doors to dry thoroughly, or, if this isn't possible, turn an electric fan onto the piece for quick drying. Before applying soap and water to upholstery, it is always wise to determine the effect on the color by testing it on an inconspicieuous spot.

While the corduroy is still damp, brush it well with a stiff brush to bring up the nap.

Will you please tell me what to do? I have a highly polished walnut dining room table. I use plastic mats and the white sticks to the varnish. So far we cannot remove it. Ether has been suggested. Carbon tetrachloride doesn't work. I want to be able to continue to use the plastic mats. The problems is to find something that will not take off the polish. A. G. C. N.

You may be able to remove the white plastic marks by rubbing them with powdered pumice and light oil. Rub only with the grain of the wood. When the white is gone, remove pumice with oil on a cloth and then polish the entire table top. Do not use ether—it would probably remove the finish.

If you will keep the table top protected with a film of well rubbed wax, the plastic will not stick as readily. Also, when hot or even warm dishes are to be placed on the mats, using a padding between them and the table will prevent sticking.

Will you kindly tell me what place would repair the handles of the bottom part of an electric broiler? L. Z.

Look under "Electrical Appliances" in the yellow pages of the telephone book for a firm which services your make of broiler. If it is a recent model they should have replacement handles on hand. If not, they can probably order them for you.

Attention E. A. S., W. B., and others who have asked for a way to stiffen lace doilies. Here is a method sent in by A. B. D. of Washington:

"A neighbor told me this little trick and I have found it most satisfactory. Wash and rinse articles, take excess water out by wrapping in a towel and pressing down with your hands. Dissolve plain gelatin in water. One package usually takes care of about ½ dozen doilies. Dip doily and lay on heavy brown paper, pin it to shape, and pull up frills with your finger tips. Let it dry and it will be stiff and stay stiff until the next washing."

Thank you!

I'd appreciate any information about the use of "powdered eggs." Can they be used in cakes, pies, and what are the proper proportions? E. G.

There is a bulletin giving most complete directions for use of dried eggs, called "Cooking With Dried Eggs." You may get a copy by writing to the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Ask for bulletin AIS-28.

The bulletin gives recipes for bread, griddle cakes, muffins, scrambled eggs, custard, cream pie filling, layer cakes, and cookies—to name just a few. In addition, there are suggestions on the use of dried egg yolks and dried egg whites.

I'd like some advice on what to do with plated silver that is worn. It is not particularly expensive silver. Do you think it is worth having replated? If not, could it be sold for metal and if so, where? H. J.

Silverware can be plated for less than it costs to replace it—and such work is very successful if done by a reliable firm. Since most silverware has a sentimental attachment for the owner, plating is definitely worthwhile. You will find firms who specialize in this work listed under "Platers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

When is the correct time to wear rhinestones — and with what type clothes? May earrings, necklace and bracelet be worn with any dress other than an evening dress? I never wear evening clothes (full length) and want to return them (the rhinestones) to the store if I learn from your letter that they will not be useful to me. M. A. C.

In this era of sumptuous fabrics, rhinestones are being worn with afternoon or cocktail type dresses quite as frequently as with evening dress.

Inquiries and contributions to the Ask Anne column must be in written form. We regret that time does not permit handling them by telephone. Address letters and cards to Anne, Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Every now and again one hears or reads a statement such as this: "If adults expect respect from children they first must show respect to them."

But what does it mean to show respect to children? Different people undoubtedly have different answers. Here's a try from my corner.

1. First and foremost, we should try to understand the whys and wherefores of youngsters' behavior. Children, like adults, have reasons for what they say and do. Before we judge harshly or inflict punishment, we owe it to the child to try to understand.

2. No matter how trying a youngster may be, neither sarcasm nor ridicule should come from the grownup. To attack an individual's respect for himself with a cutting phrase or a sneer is too strong medicine.

3. There should be no prying into what the child considers his privacy. Few adults care to have others read their letters without permission. Few accept verbal prying about matters that they feel are their own concern. There would seem to be no sound reason why children should be treated differently from grownups in this respect.

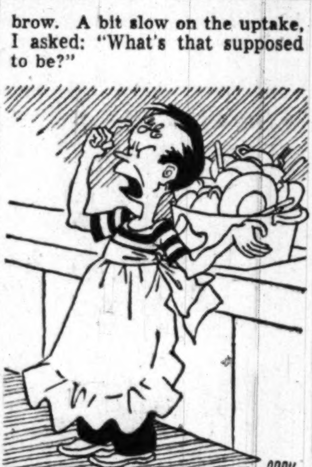
AS CORNY AS HIS DAD

There was somewhat less than the usual amount of protest when my 13-year-old relative was informed the other night that he'd have to do the dishes.

Retiring to his room for a few moments, he reappeared with the letters "GE" penciled on his brow. A bit slow on the uptake, I asked: "What's that supposed to be?"



"Well," he said as he turned on the hot water, "if I'm going to be this family's automatic dishwasher, I might as well carry the right label."

MESSAGE FROM SAYRE

Bernice M. Willey of Lanham, Md., tells me she's followed our discussion of selling techniques with great interest, because "I've heard so many sales approaches in my time I can usually anticipate the salesman's lines."

Currently, however, she says she's encountered a new wrinkle that rates special mention.

It seems that the oldest daughter of Mrs. Willey's son had gone up to Sayre, Pa., to visit her aunt and uncle. While the child was away, Mrs. Willey was at her son's house one Sunday when the phone rang and a strange voice said:

"I have a message for you from your sister in Sayre, and I'd like to come out and deliver it in person if you're going to be home."

The stranger was invited out to deliver the message, and then the family spent an anxious hour wondering whether something had happened to the daughter, or to some other member of the family. But when the stranger arrived with the "message," they were greatly relieved—and a bit annoyed.

It turned out to be nothing more than a new way to get a foot in the door to sell silverware.

TOAST TO B. L. T.

Hal Feyling of 8910 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md., gets a bit philosophical over the sale of the New York Sun, and the many newspaper folks who as a result are hunting other jobs. Hal muses:

"Yes, even the fame of a columnist is fleeting, with perhaps one exception. The late Bert L. Taylor was known to countless Chicagoans by his initials — B. L. T.—and those initials have been perpetuated in the restaurant business.

"They're now used by waitresses to designate an order for a bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich."

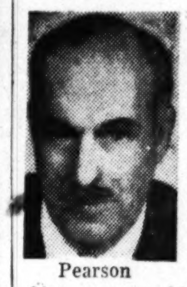
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Gangland's Hand in Government

By Drew Pearson

(Ed. Note—This is the first of a series.)

Four years ago I may have contributed to a murder in Chicago. This series of columns, therefore, is written as my contribution toward cleaning up an ever-widening area of big-city government in which such murders flourish.



Pearson

Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee has wisely put his finger on this menace in his proposed probe of interstate gambling rackets. And last summer, Senator Clyde Hoey's investigating committee unearthed an important clew linking the gambling rackets to Washington; then backed away from it as if they had stepped on a rattlesnake.

This clew was a statement by John Maragon, now under indictment, that he had worked for a man named Kastell. "Bandy Phil" K[illegible]tell, an alumnus of Atlanta Penitentiary and associate of murdered gangleader Arnold Rothstein, is the long-time partner of the current king of the gamblers, Frankie Costello, and of Bill Helis, the "Golden Greek" of the race-track world.

Republican Senators developed acknowledgement from Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan that Helis had contributed money to Democratic political campaigns.

Now, government is not supposed to have even the remotest links with gambling. But when a gambling syndicate contributes $20,000 to the campaign of a Florida sheriff who gets a salary of only $7500, or when Big Bill Lias, the Wheeling race track operator, contributes $35,000 to an earlier campaign of Lee Spillers, now United States attorney, to be prosecuting attorney, it stands to reason that the gambling syndicates can exert powerful influence with our city governments.

Although Costello now claims to be a man of peace, other gangsters have not hesitated to kidnap, hijack and murder.

This was how the murder took place in Chicago for which I may have been partly responsible.

The man murdered was Jimmy Regan, former associate of the late Moe Annenberg, who took over Annenberg's racing wire when Moe was sent to prison. This telegraph wire carries the race track results to all bookmakers, and without it no bookie can successfully operate.

The Jake Guzik syndicate of Chicago, inheritors of the old Capone gang, moved in on Regan and took over.

Regan told this writer that Pete Locivella was gambling dictator in Detroit, Dan Corotello of the Sicilian Society dominated Chicago territory was divided between gangsters, it was impossible for a night club or tavern to operate without buying ice cubes, towels and beer, renting slot machines and hiring bartenders through the old Capone syndicate.

I placed the facts before Attorney General Tom Clark and J. Edgar Hoover.

The Justice Department assigned 12 FBI men to act on the tips Regan gave them, and for a time it looked as if Chicago gangland were in for a cleanup.

But suddenly, Regan was shot.

Regan, however, did not die. Taken to the hospital he fought for his life. A month dragged by and Regan seemed out of the woods. Then suddenly he was dead.

A tube of mercury was found in his intestines. How it got there nobody knew. But the gangsters of Chicago are powerful.

Not only have they ways of getting inside hospitals, but they have ways of reaching inside the Federal Government, as we shall see in future columns of this series.
